Task force established to break Perkins' murder case

By MAC McDONALD

TAKING ITS cue from successful television shows such as America's Most Wanted, the Monterey County Sheriff's Department has set up a task force and special "hotline" in hopes of breaking open the eight-month investigation into the murder of Carmel's Linda Perkins.

Brutally clubbed to death in the driveway of her Mission Fields home in the early morning hours of July 21, 1989, Perkins' murder investigation has come to an impasse. Sheriff's investigators are hoping that someone out there has information that could lead to the arrest and conviction of the perpetrators of one of the Carmel area's most shocking crimes.

As part of the investigation, sheriff's investigators have interviewed more than 200 people across the country and have even referred the case to the FBI's National Center of the Analysis of Violent Crime (NCAVC), located at the FBI Academy at Quantico, Va. In doing so investigators are trying to get a handle or pattern on the suspect and the suspect's behavior.

According to Lins Dorman, chief investigator on the case for the Sheriff's Department, the department is now appealing to the public in order to break the case. Dorman said that there is no doubt in his mind that were Perkins to have witnessed a similar crime, she would have come forward with information about it.

"Her family and I can only hope that even though Linda is gone now, people won't turn their backs on her," Dorman said, "that they will put aside their own reluctance and fears in order to help Linda one last time."

A special number (373-6647), has been put into operation and a post office box set up to receive information: "Linda Perkins Task Force," Box A 3745, 177 Webster St., Monterey 93940.

Investigators not only hope to break open the case and arrest the perpetrator, but to prevent such a crime from being committed again by the same person.

According to Special Agent Larry Ankrom of the NCAVC, there is someone, whom they identify as a "significant other," who is close to the suspect in the case. This significant other may be aware or "haunted" with suspicions about the suspect and may also be aware of what he called a "stressor," a stressful event in the suspect's life that may have triggered this violent act.

FBI experts believe that this significant other may be fearful for their own safety, so have been reluctant to come forward with any information. But the FBI also warns that if certain stressful events were to re-occur in the suspect's life, this person could again strike out violently and unpredictably.

"It was someone who just exploded," said Dorman. "It had to be someone who was directly related to her...it was a culmination of a long ongoing dispute. But no one deserves that type of beating...no one."

According to the FBI's Ankrom, Perkins' murder was "high-risk" behavior for the suspect because of the type of crime, time of day and location: a violent act in broad daylight in a high traffic area. Ankrom added that the type of crime suggests that Perkins was not a random victim, but was targeted for some reason by her assailant. Robbery does not appear to be a motive and the crime reflects a great deal of anger directed at the victim, he said.

"We believe the weapon was a weapon of opportunity and wasn't brought to the scene," added Dorman about the aluminum baseball bat used in the crime. Dorman said the bat, a Little League-type bat used by a

Sun rights, views go to planners

By NANCY HILLS

THE ISSUES of sun rights, private views, privacy and "boxed-in" neighbors are coming back to the Carmel Planning Commission.

As the controversy around the R-1 district design codes continues and the election approaches, the planning commission will discuss and conduct a public hearing on reinstating solar rights, private views, privacy and whether the design "boxes in" neighbors in the Carmel General Plan as a part of the design review process.

The commission will meet at 3 p.m. Wednesday, March 21 in Carmel City Council Chambers to review changes to the general plan.

Those portions of design review were removed a couple of years ago by the planning commission and the change approved by the city council during the revisions to the general plan.

The commission felt that the provisions were impossible to legally enforce.

After planning commission and council discussions about residential design codes and review, the council determined that the commission should consider those elements of design during design review on a remodel or new house.

The council is in the process of discussing changes to the residential design codes. The debate has centered around whether or not reduction in the maximum size of a home on an average Carmel lot, setbacks and required open space.

Much of the concern has been generated by recently built homes that Carmel residents feel are too large and out of character with the village in a forest atmosphere.

Much of the concern was triggered by the new homes at the Kinnoull estate on Torres Street between 10th and 11th avenues.

After the death of the countess, the large parcel that constituted her estate was divided up into the legal lots of record. Many of the lots were sold to speculation builders that built out the lots to the maximum.

New Kinnoull estate homes are also along Junipero Avenue between 10th and 11th.

The row of new houses, with their straight setbacks and large homes, is usually cited during every conversation about design review and changes in the community.

For 93-year-old Carmel woman, life's adventures have just begun

By DAVID LELAND

TO THIS day, longtime Carmel resident Hildegarde Ferrera doesn't know who extended her the invitation to dance with the Mud Men of New Guinea.

But one thing is sure: while many would balk at the idea of travelling to the out-of-the-way country to have clay smeared on their bodies, Ferrera rose to the challenge and packed her bags.

The trip, she ventured, served as an excellent way to celebrate her 93rd birthday.

"I have no idea who it was and I can't seem to find out," says Ferrera, referring to the invitation printed on Peace Corps stationery. "I was kind of shocked; I had never seen the Mud Men."

She placed a quick call to her daughter and longtime travelling companion LaVonne West to get her opinion.

"Go for it," said West, from her home in Hawaii.

Last January, the duo embarked for New Guinea via Manila, Guam, Yap and Belau.

That exodus included a stopover on the island of Brunei, a isle owned by a sultan who generally discourages any tourism.

It seems West indirectly knows the sultan's son and an invitation was arranged.

"I tell you, I have never been in a bedroom like this," says Ferrera, referring to the bathroom fixtures of solid gold, as was the telephone and swimming pool bottom.

'I had a great time, but it was hard because it was so primitive. There were times when I didn't think I could make it.'

— Hildegarde Ferrera

But on to New Guinea...

Many years ago, before he had been stricken with Alzhiemer's Disease, Ferrera had travelled to New Guinea with husband Alvin, 94. That was before the Mud Men had even been discovered.

Legend has it that the Mud Men had fought constantly with a neighboring tribe

Let's get on with the election

THE PEOPLE of Carmel deserve better!

An election campaign is in progress and for three weeks the Pine Cone has allowed Howard Nieman, Jr. to write three editorials castigating the mayor, city adminstrator, two city council members, a residents association, and individual members thereof. Why?

Has this ever been done before? — one private citizen being allowed to use our local tabloid as a bully pulpit three weeks in a row (and we understand more is coming)! Would others be granted such a privlege? We think not.

Wouldn't it be more enlightening for the voters to hear the virtues of Howard's candidate(s) rather than such negative diatribes?

Even more edifying would be a discussion of the issues facing our village — traffic, parking, R-1 ordinance, Hatton Canyon, water, preservation and open space.

Carmel-by-the-Sea is a sophisticated community with knowledgeable, intelligent citizens. Rather than puzzle over the motive of Nieman, Jr.'s angry stream-of-consciousness, we think the voters would prefer to read specifics to help them make their decisions on April 10.

Let's stop the mud-slinging and get on with the election!

Future of design review

DEFINING RESIDENTIAL "character" and talking about how to protect it heads up the list of election issues this year. The Design Review issue raises several interesting questions ranging from personal taste to regulating design of homes to shaping the social and demographic mix of Carmel as we approach the next century. It really is an important issue.

To start with, design review is the process by which new construction is approved, rejected or changed by the Carmel Planning Commission and the Carmel City Council. But the size and style of our housing stock also impacts who we are as residents and what kind of community we are.

Most agree that too many homes built in the 1970s and 1980s didn't fit. Some, like to those built on former Gamble property, were too large. Others look like tract houses imported from San Jose or Fresno. They share a common problem: they don't take advantage of ther natural setting and environment that makes Carmel special — in fact they ignored our community values and offended our efforts to keep our homes special.

What also happened is that Carmel is no longer just a weekend retreat for Bay Area residents or a place to retire. Carmel is becoming a full-time place to live and work for families too. And while and 800-square-foot cottage is fine for weekend use, the average American family can't live in 800 or 1,200 square feet. At least after paying upwards of $500,000 for their house. Most peoplke want second floors. They need room for children, relatives and friends who visit. In other words, they want the "American home" in Carmel. If we want more families in town and to put some life and new energy into this community, we must accomodate these needs. Like it or not, Carmel is becoming a suburb of a growing Monterey Peninsula and Central California. We are no longer protected by relative isolation.

I hope we face these challenges. Instead of remaining isolationist, we must seize every opportunity to make Carmel better. For example, Carmel must become a balanced community if we have any hope of remaining resident-oriented businesses let alone brining some some back. If we want fewer tourists, we need more full-time reisidents. Personally, I am enthused about the prospects for a stronger Carmel-by-the-Sea.

A few thoughts on design review specifics:

Issue No. 1: Does house size matter? I don't think so. Some argue that reducing the maximum size of homes by 200 square feet to 1,400 square feet will result in better-looking homes. But how? Picture the most unattractive house in town and shrink it by 5 to 10 percent. Does it look very different? Did the reasons why you don't like the house go away? Probably not. Simplky reducing square footage, while important in relationship to lot size, will never itself make Carmel homes more attractive nor contribute much to maintaining village character. Size alone is not an issue.

Issue No. 2: On the other hand, design is critical. The term "design" incorporates concepts of mass, height, proportion, perspective and relationship to the lot and surroundings, both physical and natural. Successful design uses and blends these ingredients together. All too often, however, designers and architects impose designs which may be suitable in San Jose or Fresno, but bear little or no relationship to Carmel. Design influences the way our neighborhoods look. Design is an important issue.

Issue No. 3: Consider this formula: Materials plus design equal character. Then picture a small 800-square-foot cottage. The exterior is white stucco with a flat roof. The windows are brown metal. Little or no landscaping. A plain concrete driveway. This design satisfies the size test and meets all setbacks but is not in character with the rural environment we enjoy. But add a shake roof and shingles. Substitute wooden windows painted forest green and DG (as used on the beach walkway), for that concrete driveway. Add landscaping. The result is the same cottage with a completely new, attractive look. Materials are an important issue in design review.

And an importnat fact: the basic residential standards (allowed square footage, height, setbacks, etc.), have not changed much in several decades (contrary to some election rhetoric). Most of these big homes could have been built 20 or even 30 years ago. And many were too.

The good news is that the Carmel Planning Commission recently established a permanent Design Review Committee which meets the first Wednesday of every month to review designs, visit sites and work with applicants. Still, the basic standards need revision and the new city council will have to debate and decide these important, long-term decisions.

My conclusion: I hope we forget about reacting to the mistakes of the past and instead use our vision and experience to shape the new design review process. Let's meet the challenges of the future and beat them. Then we all win.

A clear choice

Dear Editor:

Too often in politics, the voters are presented with a "pitch" to choose a candidate only on the basis of "personality" or "background."

It is a real plus in this election for the residents of Carmel-by-the-Sea to be able to vote for a candidate because of voting record and stand on the issues. Both candidates for mayor have considerably experience in Carmel affairs. However, they are on opposite sides of key issues before our community. Let's examine some of these differences.

1. Scenic Beauty: Beach Bluff Walkway:

Carmel residents, and their visiting friends, use with pride and pleasure this beautiful walkway which winds amidst the handsome landscaping along the top of the beach bluffs beside Scenic Drive. Jean Grace was chairwoman of the task force which was responsible for planning this splendid addition to the city's western border on the ocean. The city council, with one exception, approved of this project. However, Councilmember Laiolo opposed the walkway all the way, in spite of overwhelming community support for the project.

2. Residential Design Standards:

Carmel residents are unhappy about the recent surge of building of massive, unsightly new houses on small lots in the residential area. The planning commission and the city council are currently wrestling with the question of mandating smaller houses and more open space on residential lots. More effective design review is also part of this issue. On Jan. 18, 1990 the city council passed a motion 4-1, "That the apparent bulk and size of houses in Carmel-by-the-Sea is too massive." The motion was made by Mayor Grace and the single NO vote cast by Councilmember Laiolo.

3. Open Space:

The acquisition of the Torres Street (Handley Lumberyard), and Hodges properties by the city were dramatic actions on the part of the city council to remove from potential commercial development two magnificent pieces of land. The Torres Street property also creates an impressive amount of new off-street parking adjacent to the business district. The city council voted 4-1 to make the significant commitment of financial resources to purchase these important viewsheds. Carmel residents overwhelmingly supported the Torres Street purchase, and over the long run will find the cost of protecting our southeast boundary and the Mission viewshed at Hodges most reasonable. Mayor Grace led both efforts and Councilmember Laiolo opposed both.

4. The Urban Forest:

Carmel residents are concerned about the gradual loss of the handsome forest of mature, native trees. On April 4, 1989 the city council approved an ordinance which will require a city permit to cut down certain mature native trees on private property. Mayor Grace supported the measure. The lone dissenting vote was Councilmember Laiolo.

5. Water:

The community concern about a safe and adequate water supply is well-known. Last summer, while Carmel residents and businesses were suffering under the current water-rationing program, the water board began deliberations on the issue of restricting new water connections that would protect an already-inadequate water supply for current residents and business. On July 11, 1989 the city council voted 4-1 to request the water board to take such action. Mayor Grace supported the measure. Councilmember Laiolo was the lone dissenting vote.

There are additional issues on which these two candidates differ. However, the above illustrates clearly the different philosophies of governance between these two persons. One has the vision to make important commitments for the future betterment of our community. The other stands pat and appears to be more of a caretaker. A clear choice exists for the voters of Carmel-by-the-Sea!

I am proud to be the coordinator of Mayor Grace's re-election campaign. I believe her stand on the issues represents the majority view of the voters of Carmel-by-the-Sea. Please give her your vote on April 10.

Changing sides

Dear Editor:

I worked very hard for the election of Jean Grace two years ago, thinking her administration would continue the enlightenment of Clint Eastwood's. I was wrong. I now find I am on the opposite side of some of her present views as well as the way she has recently been willing to spend our money.

A good part of the charm of living in Carmel-by-the-Sea is its village feeling due to the fact that it is small in size and in population. I object to Jean Grace's attempt to make Carmel-by-the-Sea into a small sprawl-

Council candidates put on the hot seat by CBA

By NANCY HILLS

THE CARMEL Business Association asked Carmel mayoral and council candidates five questions at its monthly meeting March 1, topics ranging from parking to the business community's relationship with city government.

The five questions included:

• Would they support a monthly liaison meeting between the city, CBA and residents?

• The CBA expressed the opinion that business owners presently feel it is very difficult to "do business" with the city. How would the candidate, once a councilmember, streamline the process (use permits, zoning issues), and would the candidate be interested in developing a brochure on city procedures?

• It has become obvious to the business community, residents and city that there is a need to upgrade Carmel's visitor population, the CBA questions states, and in the past the city council has taken the stance that it is not their responsibility to market or promote the city. In light of this, does the candidate feel it is now appropriate for the city to develop a marketing plan and support it financially and philosophically? If so how would the candidate implement and if not, why not?

• The CBA cited a letter from a tourist who complained about a parking ticket she received and an additional fine for paying late. "We are concerned about the image the city is presenting to our visitors." What would the candidate do, if elected, to correct the problem?

• A series of questions: How much money is in the in-lieu parking fee fund and how could it be used to solve the long-term parking problems? Would the candidate support two-hour parking throughout Carmel as a short-term solution? Does the candidate feel the sign ordinance needs amending?

COUNCIL AND mayoral candidates met with members of the Carmel Business Association at the CBA's regular meeting at La Playa Hotel to answer five questions related to relationship between the city and business community. (Nancy Hills photo.)

SINCE THE CBA took each candidate's statements and answers in alphabetical order, council candidate Barbara Brooks had both the advantage and disadvantage of answering first.

Barbara Brooks (council candidate): In her introductory remarks, Brooks told the CBA that she had been attending their meetings for the past few years and had worked with the organization on various events.

"Why should you vote for a candidate that is perceived as the leader of the residents rather than someone who is clearly in the business community?" she asked.

"I am liaison person," she explained. "We don't want to draw the line" between the business and residential community" or just stand around stating 'ain't it awful.' "

To the first question, "would you support a monthly liaison meeting" between the city representatives, CBA and residential community? Brooks answered yes, pointing out she already attends CBA meetings.

"What better way to help the community than to bring together (various elements) to discuss mutual concerns," she said.

Brooks said she agreed in issuing a booklet that might make the city rules and regulations easier to understand. She added that "sometimes I hear people say there are rules for the sake of rules," but those rules are there to protect the city, she said.

"I am a very firm believer in obeying the code," she said.

To the city council joining in a "marketing plan" to "upgrade" the tourist population, Brooks responded that the CBA already gets about $10,000 from the city. Instead she suggested some programs that might help attract overnight visitors. Cultural events, she said, generate revenues and perhaps the business community should encourage and advertise the cultural events in Carmel.

Additionally, she said, perhaps advertisements in foreign magazines that suggest Carmel as a destination rather than a side trip, and organization of some tours to the surrounding areas.

To the ticketed tourist's complaint that the notice for payment came from a private agency and not the city, Brooks said that the Monterey Courthouse used to collect the tickets and do the paperwork, but the county decided to stop that practice. All the cities use the agency to do their paperwork, she said, getting agreement from the other candidates.

The in-lieu fund, Brooks explained, has very little money left in it and there are basically very few in-lieu fees collected anymore. Over $200,000 of the collectd fees, which was the majority of the fund, went into the underground parking lot beneath the Norton Court senior citizen housing project.

The business community needs to think about whether or not it really wants two-hour parking, she added, because parking spaces will probably be taken by employees rather than customers then.

"I'm not sure that's what you want to do," she said.

On the sign ordinace, Brooks said, she would like to see the restrictions on graphics or pictures on signs lifted since that is what makes for interesting and individual signage in town.

Bob Fischer (incumbent and council candidate):

"My history in Carmel goes back 35 years," Fischer said.

A former Carmel police officer, Fischer was voted into office on Mayor Clint Eastwood's slate in 1986, which all adds up to "I'm in the process of writing a book" he said, adding when looking out at the audience, "you may be in it."

Fischer said the 1986 campaign was "horrendous" because of the worldwide attention, but it resulted in more people getting involved in city government and the commercial district taking more time to work things out.

"I think there can be some improvement, though," he added.

If they like the feel of the past few years, he said, "you better keep the council the same."

On the first question, Fischer said he would be "open" to monthly meetings between the city and the CBA but expressed his surprise that nowhere on the list of questions was the problem of parking.

"That surprises me," he said, adding that as part of the solution he is "in favor of a parking structure at Sunset Center."

As for the difficulty in doing business in the city, Fischer said he "would like it" to be easier and that a handbook might help.

"We are all concerned about the one-day shopper," he said to question three. "Prior to 1986, the CBA was not funded by the city council for a long time."

Now they get about $10,000 a year, he said, and he would have to look at the proposal to see "what it is going to do" before making up his mind about the council helping to market the town.

Fischer agreed with Brooks' description of how the private company became involved in collecting parking ticket fines, but added that the woman who is complaining "broke the law" and "obviously did not pay her $10 fine within 10 days" as it said on the ticket.

"If she had paid on time, she would never have heard from the company," he said. "I don't have any sympathy for her. The law says you can park for a certain amount of time."

As for the practice of using a private company, Fischer said that "the paperwork is horrendous for collecting the fines."

He again agreed with Brooks on the status of the in-lieu fee fund, but added that he believed the fees were "unfairly applied."

Two-hour parking, he said, could be detrimental, and before it is done the CBA and city should take a "very good look at it" because employees would be parking much of the day in the two-hour zones.

The sign ordinance, Fischer said, maybe needed to be "brought up to date."

He questioned some of the sale signs in town.

"How long can a store be having sale," he said. "I know of one that has had a sale sign up for two years."

Carla Ramsey (planning commission chairperson and council candidate): In her opening remarks, Ramsey told the CBA that she was "different from this illustrious group" in that she works in downtown Carmel-by-the-Sea and has been a longtime resident of the Monterey Peninsula. She is also the chairperson of the Carmel Planning Commission.

"It has been an invaluable experience in city government," she said.

"I really believe we are one community, and believe if we communicate with each other and try to co-exist we can get along," she said.

The business community and the residential community can work together to "bring the type of people we need back to Carmel."

As to the city and the businesses and residents meeting in an ad hoc committee once a month, Ramsey said that was all right if they really wanted to, but what would serve the CBA better would to have a representative at the city council and planning commission meetings.

"I think the process of government is that important," she said.

Planning commission meetings are important because that is often where the issue begins its official city discussions.

"By the time it has gotten to the council meeting, it is often too late" to address the issues, she said.

Only by attending city meetings can the business community be completely informed "and informed citizens is the only way to have government."

"I do urge you to have a representative at the city meetings," she said.

The city already has a pamphlet, she said, that explains some of the city procedures but "I think that the pamphlet should be revised."

Included should be explanations of what the different zones are — residential, residential commercial, service commercial and central commercial.

Because the city permiting process must comply with certain noticing standards and legal requirements, Ramsey said she "didn't

Mayoral hopefuls put to test too

TWO CANDIDATES are vying for the two-year mayor's seat on the five-member council, the incumbent mayor and a current councilmember, who relinquished her seat to run.

Jean Grace, (incumbent mayor and mayoral candidate):

"I've been in public service for 20 years, the last 10 years in Carmel-by-the-Sea," Grace told the CBA. "I've became involved first through ad hoc committees that worked on the Carmel Area Land Use Plan. I was on the first and second general plan committees, the (Harrison Memorial) Library board, beach pathway and bluff restoration projects."

Her opponent (Elinor Laiolo), had voted against the beach pathway, the acquisition of the Torres (Handley) Street property and other amenities in the city.

To the first question about monthly meetings, Grace said her answer was "Yes, we need a monthly liaison" meeting.

"A guidelines book is a good idea," she added on the next question.

She said she would "really like to encourage attendance at your monthly meetings" by a member of the city staff, expecially the code enforcement officer.

"Then you could ask questions and express your concerns," Grace said, adding that "about 97 percent of his contact with the commercial district is affirmative activity."

To "upgrading" or enhancing the tourist base, Grace said keeping the city beautiful and attractive was the most important way to draw overnight guests.

As way of an example, Grace said that the purchase of the Hodges property protects the Carmel Mission and the purchase of open space helps to maintain the city.

On the parking ticket letter, Grace said, the city gets "lots of them."

"I myself have received parking tickets while here in city hall," she said.

Grace said she answers all the letters that come to city hall.

The parking committee, Grace said, is working on suggestions on how to answer some of the problems. Some of the things the council has done is increase the number of green zones.

Two hour parking may not be a good idea, she said, since employees may park there and move their cars at lunch.

A committee is already formed to review the sign ordinance and some changes, particularly in interior signs, may be in order, Grace said.

Elinor Laiolo, (councilmember and mayoral candidate:)

"The city derives 75 percent of its budget from hostelry tax. Recently, instead of repairing our streets we purchased a piece of flood plain (Hodges). We need a mayor that understands all segments of the city and has experience with budgets and programs," she said.

In the past four years, Laiolo said, she has been consistent on her stands on the issues and voted negatively after she studied the issues, often information not provided to the council.

Her answer to the first question, Laiolo said "I think it is very important that avenues of communication are kept open."

It might be good to establish some kind of series of topics, she added.

"I really don't like the idea of Big Brother looking down on us," Laiolo said on the second question, "people saying 'your shoes ain't shined.' You are the people who provide 75 percent of the budget. We could provide the services that would help you as much as we can within confines of city government."

As for promoting the city, Laiolo said that the CBA has been fortunate to have been getting money from the city council the last four years.

"We should be open to all to come to our city, not just narrowed down to a small group," she said.

Laiolo said she "certainly would apologize" to the woman who wrote the letter about her parking ticket "for the mistreatment."

There should be "some improvement" so this kind of thing does not reflect on the city.

"In regard to two-hour parking, the city found it worked out very well during the month of December," she said.

The sign ordinance, Laiolo said, "you are in the marketing business and know what will draw into your store the best."

"I think we, as a city, can learn from your knowledge of type of signs that are the most effective. We can learn from your experience."

Council candidates questioned

see how it could be shortened in any way."

"I believe the type of person coming to Carmel has changed, but I think that's a societal change" and the result of other factors on the peninsula, such as the (Monterey Bay) Aquarium and hotels built on Cannery Row have taken many of the overnight tourists away from Carmel.

"We have to draw them back," she said.

She said she heard of at least one Monterey motel that was telling tourists not to go to Carmel because there is no beach and no view.

"If that is the type of thing that is going on, maybe you should look into it," she said.

The situation of the tourist with the parking ticket, Ramsey said she goes through it all the time herself parking downtown, but that is the law. She parked overtime and she got a ticket and that is the way it will be until "we get a garage built," she said.

However, she said, it would be better if they gave the ticket more pleasantly.

"It's not half as bad if it is done with a smile," she said.

Stating the other candidates before her had already explained the in-lieu fee situation, Ramsey moved on to the next part of the question, two-hour parking.

"At the moment, I would not support two-hour parking spaces all over town," she said.

One-hour spaces are needed, she said, and again referred to the need for a parking garage.

The sign ordinance, Ramsey said, was just recently reviewed and worked on by the planning commission.

"There were many public meetings where everyone had a chance to say what they wanted. The reason for changing it was to save the ambiance of Carmel," she said.

She would, she added, listen to any suggestions on the ordinance anyone wanted to make.

Future plans for valley village brought together by committee

By DAVID LELAND

PLANS GOVERNING future design for Carmel Valley Village moved forward this week, as mandated in the Carmel Valley Master Plan.

The document, now known as the "Carmel Valley Village Mini-Plan," will return to the Monterey County Board of Supervisors for fine-tuning in about three weeks.

"Carmel Valley Village is a county town and we look to you to protect us," said Peter Coakley, speaking for the committee that prepared the plan. "This document is a serious matter...we want it to have some teeth."

Rounding out the committee, which has spent three years on the report, are Bob Heald, Randy Randazzo, Debbie Sexton and Roger Williams.

The group conducted numerous public hearings and met countless hours reviewing criteria for future development in the village area.

"This brings the final focus of the master plan to Carmel Valley Village," said 5th District Supervisor Karin Strasser Kauffman, referring to the plan that will govern the valley into the next century.

The mini-plan addresses the following areas: exterior appearance, architectural style, materials and colors, siting and grading, outside storage, vegetation preservation and landscaping, lighting, signage, pedestrian circulation, development of the airport and peripheral issues affecting the village area.

During this week's hearing, supervisors balked at endorsing the committee's request for signage on Carmel Valley Road for businesses located off of that thoroughfare.

"I can't support that request — it's opening Pandora's Box," said Strasser Kuffman, adding that real estate prices for land abutting Carmel Valley Road are higher. "I appreciate the dilemma. Anybody who is not on Carmel Valley Road will be harder to find."

She added that businesses such as Robles Del Rio Lodge and Begonia Gardens existed before current regulations in the master plan barred such signage.

Even if supervisors had gone along with the committee's request, it would have been illegal, according to Bob Slimmon, county planning and building director.

The mini-plan cannot be less restrictive than the overall master plan, he said.

Also, plans to restrict hours of operation in service centers in the village came under question, according to Efren Iglesia, deputy county counsel.

"The county's police power is very broad," he said. "(But) when you reach into hours, it's tenuous at best."

Iglesia recommended that hours be assessed at the time the project applicant applies for a use permit.

Polling place to be moved

THE MONTEREY County Election Department and the Carmel City Clerk's Office have announced a change in polling place for Carmel Precinct 2 in the upcoming April 10 General Municipal Election.

Voters who normally vote at the Cherry Foundation will now be voting at the Harrison Memorial Library Park Branch located on the northeast corner of Mission and Sixth. Cherry Foundation personnel informed the election department that their facility would not be available for use as a polling place in this election. Carmel City Clerk Jeanne Brehmer arranged for use of the Harrison Library Park Branch.

Voters are reminded that the location of their polling place is printed on the back of their sample ballot. Voters should check the location before proceeding to the polls.

Voters with questions may call the election department at 647-7621 or the city clerk's office at 624-2781.

Released bald eagle found dead, reward offered for information

By DAVID LELAND

EFFORTS BY the Ventana Wilderness Sanctuary to boost the state's bald eagle population have suffered a temporary setback.

But officials were taking in stride the news that one of the non-profit organization's 27 bald eagles released over the past four years is now dead from a shotgun wound to the head.

"It wasn't duck season, but it was found with duckshot in its brain," said Nell Newman, Ventana Wilderness Sanctuary executive director, referring to X-rays taken of the animal.

Indeed, the group had high hopes that the bird, known only as "Bald Eagle B," would join another such bird already living at Lake San Antonio in re-establishing the county's bald eagle population.

"We figured it would be a good place to re-establish four breeding pairs," said Newman, adding that the gunshot could have come from nearby Hunter Ligget military area. "For us it was disillusioning; we already had one bird there — it could have learned from him."

To be sure, the process of rebuilding the state's bald eagle population is a lengthy one — the birds do not breed until they are 5 to 6 years old.

"We at the Ventana Wilderness Sanctuary are upset that so much time and effort had gone into raising and releasing this bird...only to have it shot," added Newman.

The news is especially sad for those who have long-awaited the return of the majestic bird, last seen in Big Sur in 1933.

Newman cited the construction of Highway 1, habitat destruction, DDT, poaching and the collecting of eggs as reasons for the birds' departure from the county.

The bald eagle is protected under the Eagle Protection Act, as well as the Endangered Species Act.

Penalties for killing one of the birds range from fines up to $10,000 to two years in prison.

THE BIRD currently living at Lake San Antonio was discovered in Vancouver in July 1988 and given to the sanctuary in August of that year.

Two months later officials found the bird in Humboldt County suffering from malnutrition.

During the next year, a bald eagle biologist from the Institute of Wildlife Studies exercised the bird and prepared it for release.

The bird was released with the assistance of the Predatory Bird Research Group about six months ago.

The dead bird, Eagle B, which was only about 4 months old, had been released 40 days prior to its death.

Officials tracked the bird, which had a wingspan of nearly 6 feet, by using a sophisticated radio transmitter with a battery that holds a charge of up to two years.

It had last been sighted four days before its death.

Newman added that the Ventana Wilderness Sanctuary will release 10 more bald eagles in the coming months.

At one time, the eagles could be found in 48 states. Now only 38 states have a bald eagle population.

In fact, during the Civil War, about 50,000 bald eagles lived in this country. Only 83 breeding pairs can now be found in California.

Newman said she will continue to spread the word on the plight of the bald eagle.

"It (the shooting) makes me feel that, obviously, we are not doing enough education," she said, adding that most Americans would not kill a bird so strongly identified with the nation. "Usually people are pretty patriotic."

Newman said that the eagle may have been mistakenly shot because, being a young bird, it lacked the readily identifiable white head plumage seen on familiar items ranging from stamps to U.S. currency.

Anyone with information about the shooting may call the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service at (916) 978-4861 or the state Department of Fish and Game at 800-952-5400.

A reward of up to $2,500 has been offered by the Ventana Wilderness Sancturary for information leading to an arrest.

An ounce of prevention

IN AN effort to maintain a sense of safety at Carmel High School in case of disaster, Coast Savings has donated an earthquake survival kit to the school. Here, Vice Principal Joe Feldeisen (left), received the kit from Coast Savings branch manager Robert Giraudo. Created by Extend-A-Life, the kit lists for about $380 and will serve a group of 10 people for as long as 72 hours. Included in the safety kit are 60 pouches of water, survival food, a first-aid kit, blankets, dynamo radio, lite sticks, American Red Cross books and rope. Feldeisen said he would like to place at least two kits in each classroom and is currently seeking funding. (David Leland photo.)

ing city by proselytizing outlying regions to annex to the vilage.

The majority of the present water board has declared its intent to spend, for other purposes, connection charge money which most of us thought was to be used to build a dam or to reduce the cost to us consumers after the dam was built.

The board plans to use this money to pursue desalinization (exorbitantly expensive), reclamation (remember the water hyacinth reclamation fiasco?), and to fund costs associated with well drilling by Cal-Am (before the district was formed Cal-Am paid those expenses itself).

None of these projects will provide adequate drought reserves nor protect the ravaged Carmel River. Jean Grace has indicated support for such action by the water board. I am appalled!

I've changed my support to Elinor Laiolo.

Wrong impression

Dear Editor:

The comments in your newspaper by Howard Nieman the past few weeks have created a wrong impression with regard to Ken White and the support he receives in our community.

Ken has long been involved in city activities and politics, long before there was a Carmel Residents Association. His involvement in recreation goes back to Mayor Norberg's and Mayor Laiolo's administrations, continued in Mayor Townsend's regime and culminated with the establishment of a recreation department and recreation commission during Mayor Eastwood's reign.

He has had tenures on the forest and beach commission and the planning commission. His involvement in other community and school activities is well known. He was a vice president of the Carmel Citizens Committee, so he knows the importance of citizens' groups. Ken's philosophy always has been one of being involved, which is the major reason he ran for office two years ago.

It is disturbing to me as one who assisted in his election to city council to read such comments as "Ken White was elected on the basis of CRA support and owes his political job to CRA support." Nothing could be further from the truth.

Ken hears from numerous citizens on numerous issues on a regular basis; some of these citizens are CRA members. Ken's vote on issues before the council is based on what he perceives as the best for most of the people. If the CRA agrees with his vote, fine; if they disagree with his vote, so be it.

Howard Nieman's approach seems to be based on some unfounded fear that if a CRA candidate is elected to the city council in April (to add to the votes of White and Wright), that the majority will be tainted. How absurd.

I am not a member of the CRA because I happen to disagree with the opinions expressed by some of its more outspoken members. This letter has not been written to praise or to criticize the CRA. It has been written to point out to the people of Carmel what Ken White stands for: fairness, honesty, and a talent for listening to his constituency.

Getting snookered

Dear Editor:

The editorial written by Howard Nieman on March 1 really opened my eyes to what is going on in our small village.

Going in debt for $3.5 million over a 20-year period for the Hodge's property is really a crime, especially to purchase land outside of our city limits.

Half of the land is in the flood plain which sounds like the Florida swamp land purchase that took place several years ago when so much land was sold that could not be used.

This purchase leads me to believe that any money spent over 15 cents should have the approval of the voters, not three people on the city council.

Also this purchase with no fiscal responsibility behind it should be grounds for a recall of three of the four council members and mayor that voted to buy the Hodges property (Laiolo voted against it.)

Clint Eastwood really made a good buy at $5.5 million for the Mission Ranch, he got 21 acres, a going motel business, restaurant and lots of buildings — we really got snookered didn't we?

When Clint Eastwood was mayor he would poll the Carmel citizens to get approval for million dollar indebtedness like the beach board walk, the library or the Handley property. Why hasn't the present administration had the courtesy to ask us before committing over a million dollars of our money to the Hodges property which none of, or few of us will use. I'm sure Elinor Laiolo would.

'Preferred alternative'

Dear Editor:

Wallace Holm, architect/planner, has worked out refinements of the split-route alternative to a Hatton Canyon Freeway. The modified design looks very good to me — especially at the mouth of Carmel Valley.

Caltrans has not given the split route or widening alternatives adequate consideration in their EIS.

Is it not time, after 35 years, to have an even-handed, objective evaluation of all the alternatives by an independent traffic engineer and planner before deciding which is the "preferred" alternative?

Several alternatives should be evaluated for traffic benefits, cost, effect on future development, environmental and visual consequences. They are:

Widening the existing highway; split route; Canada del Segunda bypass; and bypass for Carmel Valley/Monterey commuters coupled with minor widening of Highway 1.

Only after the consequences of a decision on an alternative are known should the decision be made.

This project has never been resolved

Water crisis

Dear Editor:

It's been over five weeks now that the 1989 Grand Jury issued its special investigation of the water agencies in these parts. That report on the water section was called "Water: A Crisis in Monterey County". It was particularly critical of the part the county board of supervisors have played in this water crisis amidst a three-year California drought.

Close observers of the intensifying water crisis throughout the county wonder when the board of supervisors will place on its agenda this Grand Jury water issue. More timely than ever is the need of the concerned public to know how the county board reacts to the challenges that the Grand Jury made pertaining to water problems.

The supervisors response to the mismanagement of our water resources and lacking an adequate water plan for the whole county will be important to the public in view of last week's awakening by chairman Petrovich's challenge for much greater funding for needed water projects.

We hope the board will place the Grand Jury water section on their Tuesday agenda within the next month. It should be separate from the full Grand Jury report and allow some one to two hours of public comment and feedback.

Alternatively, a special workshop session on the same subject could be held in the evening. Anyway, the reaction of the public to the Grand Jury water recommendations should be well vocalized. That feedback should be available before the Karas-del Piero proposal for major water projects be consummated or readied for board actions.

There is a lot of dirty laundry to be processed as we all get more serious about real solutions to our water crisis. Let's get it all out in the open early and lay down some milestones for accomplishing a fully adequate county wide water/sewage/drainage plan and policies.

W.C. Woodworth

No solution

Dear Editor:

The federal government may save us yet! At least the Federal Highway Administration is smart enough not to give money for widening Highway 1. What a waste that would be: to spend $7 million (or more, more likely), on something which can only be called temporary relief, since before too many years a road would have to be put through Hatton Canyon anyway. A short-term solution for a long-term problem is no solution at all, and in the meantime a now-beautiful entrance to Carmel would be destroyed.

This $7 million might better be applied to what is going to have to be done anyway. At a meeting on April 6, 1982, the Carmel City Council came out four-square for keeping the option of a state highway through Hatton Canyon because Caltrans said one of the options would be to sell the property. Who would buy it? Nobody but a developer who could put houses in there, and the property alongside Safeway and Mission Inn could be sold for commercial use. Do you want more people and more traffic to add to what we have now?

At that meeting Frank Lloyd (Sr., I presume), stated, "Sooner or later we are going to have to have it or Carmel will be more and more congested." This was at least the sixth stand taken by the Carmel City Council since 1953. It does not seem as if too much faith should be placed in them!

The people who want to widen Highway 1 don't seem to be thinking the problem through very carefully. What would they do with the traffic during the widening? Are they unable to appreciate the beauty of the highway now and to understand that it would no longer resemble its present state? It would be good to have a bridge across Highway 1 at the high school for the safety of the students?

Long ago I was one of those 6,000 who signed the petition to put the road through Hatton Canyon instead of widening Highway 1. How many times do we have to be on record? At least one of my letters is in the file that was sent to the federal people some time ago. Why do I have to keep on writing?

It is unfortunate that the road through the canyon wasn't built in the mid-'60s which is what the highway department predicted after the purchase of the right of way. The cost would have been much less and the people who are so unhappy now could have gone to live someplace more to their liking. It was all on their maps.

At one point, in 1982, Caltrans stated that if Highway 1 was widened (to seven lanes!), and later a road was put through Hatton Canyon it would be more or less procedure for Caltrans to restore Highway 1 to its previous condition and turn it over to local government and let it revert to use by local residents. Is this the way money should be spent?

Regarding the berm planned over Rio Road: How many people have stood on Rio Road west of Highway 1 and given a good look at what one sees now: traffic lights and an unattractive gas station. This is something to be admired? How could a bridge which would probably be planted with ivy or some other vine which would hang down over it be less attractive? The hills would still be in view.

As long ago as 1959 the Department of Transportation recognized the need for the Hatton Canyon road, and in 1975 wrote that "the need is even more apparent today." This was 15 years ago. How much longer do we have to wait?

I have much correspondence on this subject going back to the very beginning, but why do we have to go on and on and on with no action to solve the growing traffic congestion in a way that would take care of it long-term?

Lust for control

Dear Editor:

The continuing Carmel Follies Show has become more than froth on top of the political brew. Once the quibbling over the exact hue of a newly-painted hotel, or pedestrians carrying ice cream cones on the public way, or whether downtown flower boxes should be painted as the owner desired was merely irritating, city hall affrontery; now the paper reports two actions of more sinister impact.

No present resident "arrived" on the barren wind-swept dunes of Carmel. These residents arrived by birth, inheritance, purchase or rental to find streets, water, waste-removal in place, shepherded by a spare city government charged with public health and safety...all those delights conferred by entrepreneurs with development capital.

These arrivals promptly embraced the Holy Pine Tree religion which anoints its members as highway engineers and architectural critics. A number of the tree-worshipers joined in a residents' association akin to the Flat Earth Society in its ability to reject reality. This group ignores the fact that business taxes support 70-plus percent of the city budget and that the payrolls of merchants, builders and entrepreneurs provide the economic foundation for the community. The politicos gull the unthinking by repeating the soothing mantra, "this is a residential city." They glibly ignore the fact that Carmel is a destination resort community where nearly 50 percent of the homes are second homes, a few of which are rentals, plus, of course, the locally owned homes of permanent citizens.

But now, within the dark shadows of Carmel's untrimmed forests, where the sun never shines — where hypocrisy and pretention flourish — has arisen ... lust! Yes, dear readers, lust for control; control this, control that; if it moves, control it; if it doesn't move, control it. This witless fervor is being pushed by a minority troglodyte group with the passion and intolerance of true believers. Their latest passion is "open space."

Of course that is a buzz-word like "Mom" and "Apple Pie." Everyone enjoys open space; no one is against it, but few can define it. No group can agree as to what is enough. The present residents, with a broad ocean only a stroll away, did not complain about open space until their Carmel Charmer Cottages were replaced by more substantial and liveable buildings. Before they complained, they took time to chortle over their financial windfall when these "charmers," one-board thick, held erect by the tightly-clasped hands of termites, sold for hundred of thousands of dollars. Carmel was doing rather well until the buzzword brigade found its targets — "larger setbacks," "reduce square footage," "lower heights."

There is no need to change existing land use measurements because of such subjective clamor. There is no requirement to meddle with something that is not broken. It's not written in stone that every new structure has to have 100 percent approval of all observors. It is written that it must comply with health and safety codes. The owner, that mostly abused and ignored citizen, has more than the right to pay taxes. He has the right to choose the aesthetics of his own home, including open space. It is an errant presumpchild, has been identified as belonging to Perkins' daughter, but she has denied that.

Besides the bat and some other physical evidence, investigators have little to go, said Dorman, thus the appeal to the public. Perkins' ex-husband had been identified early in the case as a suspect, but investigators have been unable to question him extensively. Perkins' son, also identified as a suspect at one point, has been "cleared of any wrongdoing," said Dorman.

"The ex-husband is still a possibility," said Dorman, "but he's not the only available person. It could be anybody."

Thus investigators are focusing on that "significant other" who may know or be related to the suspect and may have noticed dramatic or even subtle changes in their normal behavior, but is afraid or reluctant to come forward for fear of retaliation.

"For their own safety, the 'significant other' is urged to come forward with their information," said Dorman. "The Sheriff's Department wants to assure this individual that they will afford them the necessary protection and anonymity they feel they might need."

Pine Cone looking for a few good houses

THE CARMEL Pine Cone invites the residents of Carmel to decide what is "Carmel character."

Residents are invited to select and photograph the five homes they most like within Carmel's one mile square and mail or bring the photographs to the newspaper's office.

Each photograph should include a written explanation of why that particular home is an example of Carmel character and good architecture. The name, address and telephone number of the person or group submitting the photograhs must be included.

The examples will be used in a future article.

The photographs and accompanying explanation should be sent to Photos, Carmel Pine Cone, P.O. Box G-1, Carmel, 93921 or brought to the Pine Cone office between 8:30 a.m. and 5 p.m. at the northeast corner San Carlos Street and Ocean Avenue, upstairs.

Black and white photographs are preferred. Inexpensive black and white prints can be done with Ilford XP1 film which can be printed using the color processing at normal color print rates.

So long, Mannie!

A FAREWELL party for popular postal clerk Mannie Darby held on his last day at the Carmel-by-the-Sea Post Office featured a certificate making Mannie an honorary lifetime member of the CRA, a poem by Belinda Holliday and cake and coffee for post office employees and patrons. The new postmaster, Donn Carmody, who was present and introduced by Station Manager David Maradei, remarked, "Now I understand what a wonderful spirit you have in this community — it's a pleasure to be here." On hand were (left to right) Barbara Brooks, Linda Anderson, Mannie Darby, and Belinda Holliday. Greg Cellitti of Friar Tuck's provided the hot coffee. The poem by Holliday, read by her husband J.S. Holliday, was entitled Mannie, We'll Miss You.

Some feel it should be privatized
With money to spend and publicized.
Three stamps only for a dollar
Is enough to make anyone holler!
If success is what the P.O.'s after,
for good business mixed with laughter
We all know to be expedient
Our Mannie is the ingredient!
All the folks of nine two three
Don't know how lucky they're going to be.
They'd better treat him well, with care,
And not take the curl out from his hair.
We'll miss you Mannie, in many ways.
You're a poop to leave, we love you anyways!

Goodwill returns to Mid-Valley

GOODWILL'S VISITING Attended Donation Station will be arriving in Carmel Mid-Valley on March 15. It will be installed in the Mid-Valley Shopping Center for a three-month stay.

To accept donations, an attendant will be on hand from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. and from 1:30 p.m. to 5 p.m., seven days a week. People are urged to bring their donations during attended hours to ensure that their contributions reach Goodwill safely and undamaged. Attendants are also pleased to provide tax deductible receipts during these hours.

In 1989, 1,340 donors brought clothing, furniture, household goods, books and toys to the Carmel Mid-Valley Attended Donation Station. Goodwill turned these contributions into dollars to assist 435 disabled individuals with job evaluation, training and job placement services last year.

For her, adventure's just begun

and lost for many years.

One day the warriors jumped in the river and became coated with clay. The neighboring tribe, thinking they were ghosts, never bothered them again.

Ferrera took part in their annual thanksgiving for their good fortune.

When she arrived at the village two women immediately took her to a grass hut and removed her clothing and covered her with clay.

A grass skirt, six strands of beads around her neck and headgear made of bird feathers and she was ready to hit the dance floor.

"It doesn't amount to anything," says Ferrera, of the 30-minute dance. "They just jump around like a bunch of chickens."

THE REAL hurdle for Ferrera came when it was time to remove the clay from her body.

It seems that the river would just recoat her body with clay if she tried to wash off there and the village had no shower.

Her guide then drove her 15 miles to an out-of-business hotel that still had running water. For a "few" dollars she was able to bathe.

"It was terrible," says Ferrara, who still finds pieces of clay on parts of her body more than a month after the ceremony.

Ferrera's vanity surely received a boost in New Guinea, where the average life span is only 45 years.

It seems that one local chieftain was prepared to pledge countless pigs, the local form of currency, for her hand in marriage.

She declined — she did not want to be his third wife.

In addition to visiting the Komodo Islands, noted for their 30-foot-long Komodo Dragon lizards, Ferrera's entourage also stopped over at the primitive village of We Wak — the original home of the headhunters.

After travelling 50 miles by car over bumpy road and three hours via canoe, Ferrera was met by the sound of native drums and a large banquet.

The menu? Wild dog, crocodile, wild boar, python and bush fowl eggs.

I took a little of each and I must confess they were all very tasty," says Ferrera. "But the night wasn't what I would call a perfect one — right outside my bed there hung eight skulls sort of looking at me."

While Ferrera thoroughly enjoyed the trip, she's ready for something a little gentler, such as the glider trip she took for her 92rd birthday.

"I had a great time, but it was hard because it was so primitive," she says of New Guinea. "There were times when I didn't think I could make it."

Born in 1887 in Salem, S.D., to an affluent family — her great grandfather was Dr. Scholl, founder of the well-known foot products company — Ferrera's first venture occured when she travelled with her parents to Europe in 1912.

With respites for raising her daughter, working as the head of the Postal Savings Department during World War II and the Internal Revenue Service, Ferrera has never quelled her wanderlust.

Ferrera has been around the world seven times, dined with Dr. Albert Schweitzer, ridden camels in Egypt, walked the Great Wall of China, spent Easter in Jerusalem, taken a 44-day trip on the Trans-Siberian Railway and flown over the Alps in a hot air balloon.

To her longevity, however, she credits her 33 trips to the Austrian spa Bad Ischl. She is scheduled for her 34th trip this August.

The mineral baths and massages during her three-week stays agree with her.

"I think it does a person a lot of good," she says. "I also think walks, eating properly and getting plenty of rest help."

For her 94th birthday Ferrera plans to go to one of two places she has never visited — Antarctica.

"I've been everywhere else in the world," she says, adding that Angola is the only other place she's missed. "I've been everywhere you could possibly think of."

FOR HER 93rd birthday, Carmel resident Hildegarde Ferrera travelled to New Guinea to dance with the aboriginal Mud Men. She is shown here in full regalia before the ceremony.

She'll tailor a safety plan for seniors — for free

By DAVID LELAND

FORMER CARMEL Foundation social services director Linda Geisenburg has returned to Carmel with a proposition that should please each and every senior.

Regardless of financial condition, Geisenburg's Healthcare Connections, a private, non-profit organization, will assist seniors 55 and over in coming up with the most cost-effective plan for remaining safely in their homes — for no fee.

'While there are facilities which provide such care, the goal of most professionals in the health care field is to enable the person to remain in their own home for as long as safely possible.'
— Linda Geisenburg

To be sure, there is no shortage of information and referral services for seniors on the peninsula. But many times that acts as a detriment, rather than a luxury.

"They get bombarded," says Executive Director Geisenburg, who served with Carmel Foundation for more than three years before taking a leave to travel. "They either end up with too much care or not enough."

Healthcare Connections gathers information from many agencies and presents that information to clients in the hospital or at home.

"In doing this the client will have someone to guide them through the maze, while also advising them of the cost, which services are offered at a reduced rate or free by the community and which services may be reimburseable by a third party, such as Medicare or insurance," explains Geisenburg.

If the assessment is made in a client's home, Healthcare Connections will take that opportunity to make an on-site safety inspection. Workers make sure rugs, cords and telephones are safely located and make recommendations for grab bars, which minimize the risk of falls.

"The idea is to provide the safest and securest environment they can have in their home," says Geisenburg.

Healthcare Connections will also advise and clarify documents such as durable powers of attorney for fiduciary and healthcare purposes.

"The idea behind Healthcare Connections is to cover as many of the bases as possible," says Geisenburg. "All too often a care plan is limited to medical needs and does not take into consideration the myriad of peripheral issues which arise within a medical situation."

SOUND TOO good to be true? It simply is an idea whose time has come.

Founded with $30,000 of seed money from Norvell Health Care owners Cynthia Clayton, a registered nurse, and psychologist David Wolff, Healthcare Connections resulted from a need, says Geisenburg.

After returning to the peninsula from her travels, Geisenburg found that the majority of calls she received involved seniors needing help in sorting out their health care options.

On March 1 Healthcare Connections was realized to fill that void.

The board of directors currently consists of Clayton, Wolff, Dr. Calvin Lum, attorney Ken Krupf and Geisenburg.

Carmel attorney Sidney Morris and Lynda Avey, vice president of Sumitomo Bank, have also been invited to serve on the board.

While the organization has sufficient funding for one year of operation, Geisenburg said the service will be perpetuated through charitable donations.

Offices are currently located in downtown Monterey, but will move to Carmel shortly.

"This is where I really want to be," says Geisenburg, adding that social services worker Elizabeth Dawkins is volunteering her time to the cause. "We have so many seniors here that are in their houses that can barely get up in the morning."

While some term Carmel's seniors as "affluent," Geisenburg says money cannot always solve health care problems.

"Some people have a lot of money but is does them no good because they can't get the services they need," she says, adding that many are also reticent to seek help. "There is a fear that they will be forced out of their homes — it's a Depression-era ideology."

Geisenburg says Healthcare Connections' principal thrust is to keep the elderly from ending up in nursing homes, which many times is a confusing experience.

With that in mind, the only fee-based service offered by the organization is that of live-in caregiver.

"Many people who need help in their homes come to a place where they need 24-hour assistance," says Geisenburg. "While there are facilities which provide such care, the goal of most professionals in the health care field is to enable the person to remain in their own home for as long as safely possible."

FORMER CARMEL Foundation social services director Linda Geisenburg has returned to Carmel with a free health care service for seniors. (David Leland photo.)

While the current live-in caregiver rate averages about $5,000, Geisenburg says the same service will be provided by Healthcare Connections for as little as $3,500.

tion that a bureaucratic aesthetic-eye even exists. Freedom of expression in a housing statement, is constitutionally protected.

The most odious, mean-spirited, discriminatory, dishonest ordinance is the proposed "granny" unit measure which grants scoff-laws immunity where those units are brought up to health and safety codes. There is no restriction on their use. However, new units, meeting all the same criteria can only be constructed if there is a "hardship," and must revert if the hardship is abated...as determined by the planning department! This establishes two classes of granny unit with the sneak-in unit becoming a valuable property interest, enriching those who broke the law, while the legitimate code-certified new unit is a transient affair subject to the whim of the planning department. What other residence in Carmel requires planning department approval as to the social/medical relationship among the occupants? That is officious intermeddling and abuse of power. Eliminate the distinctions.

The planning department, by its own admission is two to five months behind in construction-plan approval. This demonstrated incompetence in such a fundamental responsibility, should not be enlarged by further city-imposed discretionary powers. The basic inequities of the ordinance would establish a sea of troubles upon which indigent lawyers would feed forever, with unending legal costs to the cty and property owners.

This lust for control exhibits a contempt for the rights of citizen-owners. Now is the time to slay the "control" monster in Carmel. Just stop this nonsense, or the disgusted majority will push a plan to divert the Hatton Canyon Freeway right through the center of Carmel and layer-over the City Hall.

A great improvement that! Got your attention...?

Good of community

Dear Editor:

Having lived in the area a relatively short while, I wouldn't know Howard Nieman if he walked in the front door, but after reading his diatribe against the Carmel Residents Association (March 8 Pine Cone), I don't think I'd want him coming through said front door.

Being newcomers here, my wife and I took the opportunity of joining what seemed like an interesting and informative group, the CRA. We have never regretted it. In one year, this association has provided a forum for us to hear speakers and partake in discussions on subjects such as the water shortage, city planning, the proposed Hatton Canyon Freeway, city government, downtown parking, residential concerns and others.

The only politicization we have observed was the candidates' night and the caucus to determine if and whom the CRA should endorse. Whether we agree or not with the endorsements, we firmly believe that the CRA has the good of the community at heart and is not a political action committee as Mr. Nieman alleges.

Instead of breaking into hives of frustrating anguish, perhaps Mr. Nieman should work on attaining an emotional maturity which would strengthen rather than weaken his public utterances.

Furthering destruction

Dear Editor:

Holy Cow! Betty Barron's column of March 8th concerning the Hatton Canyon Freeway cries for a response, so here we go. Some points to address:

1. Caltrans design for the Hatton Canyon is not one for a roadway. It is for a four-lane freeway accomodating traffic traveling at the maximum legal speed of 55 mph that ends two lanes south of Carmel River Bridge.

2. The bridge — The old bridge will be removed and replaced by a three- or four-lane new bridge.

3. Widening Highway 1 south of the river a possibility? Take a look at the projects in the EIR that include 1,000 new residential units proposed for south of Carmel and draw your own conclusions. Those in the Highlands who think they will be helped by the freeway that helps to allow more and more development, will find if not a larger road going by their homes, then additional signal lights south of Carmel to assist people from those new units in getting onto Highway 1. Some congestion moved further south!

4. Safety on Highway 1 between Carpenter and Carmel River Bridge — There has been one fatality since 1986 on that stretch of road. It involved one drunken driver in his own automobile and happened at about 2:30 a.m.

According to the state highway patrol, speed kills — if Highway 1 were widened to four lanes between Ocean Avenue and Rio Road, it would not be a high-speed road. Its counterpart between Carpenter Street and Ocean Avenue is the safest stretch of four-lane highway in the state.

5. Local traffic served by the Hatton Canyon Freeway — it won't be. Those coming from the south and wishing to go into Carmel will either have to turn left on Oliver Road (just north of the bridge), across two lanes of oncoming traffic or exit at Carmel Valley Road and go through a single-point diamond traffic signal that in itself will cause back-up and congestion. There will be no exit at Rio Road to service businesses in that area. Carmel Rancho Boulevard will become more impacted, congested and dangerous because all traffic from the freeway wishing to go to the mouth of the valley's commercial district will have to use it as an access.

6. Widening Highway 1 versus Hatton Canyon Freeway alternative — Gregg Albright of Caltrans stated that if the existing highway were widenend it would have a usable service time of 17 to 18 years at a cost of $7 million. Hatton Canyon would have a usable service time of 20 years at a cost of $33.4 million. Take your choice.

7. The significance of preserving Hatton Canyon — obviously Ms. Barron does not know that almost 700 people have been led on walks through the canyon in 1989 and the first months of 1990. The ages of the participants have ranged from 2 years old to 85. Those who had not known the canyon have marveled at the beauty and diversity found in it. Stands of native Monterey pine easing into oak forests with trees 300-400 years old, riparian wetland flora, a significant fresh water marsh and small waterfalls combined in a canyon two miles in length and so accessible for residents' and visitors' use by foot is something that most sensitive communities would die for. A scenic freeway it would not be.

All of the aforementioned plus the attendant wildlife would be destroyed or displaced.

I also live very close to Highway 1, practically over it. I cannot see our quality of life improved by more asphalt being laid to accomodate ever more vehicular traffic. We need instead to think of preserving important environmental areas, slowing down, thinking smaller regarding development, getting out of our cars and into alternative modes of transportation, working to retain the remaining great beauty we have here and not to implement projects that will further its destruction.

Sadie Hawkins

THE TIME has come for the girls to ask the guys to the traditional Sadie Hawkins Dance at Carmel High School. Although Sadie Hawkins is a commonly used term, very few people know of its origin.

Sadie Hawkins Day, traditionally Nov. 3 or the first Saturday of that month, was established in the Li'l Abner comic strip in the 1930s. Cartoonist Al Capp, known for his satirical representations of society and customs, tried to capture his feeling that all women, at that time, were out to destroy the independence of the male.

Capp used "Sadie Hawkins Day" as a day when women and girls are encouraged to take the initiative of inviting the man or boy of their choice for a date. An analysis devoted to Li'l Abner once stated that particularly on Sadie Hawkins Day, the single men were hunted down across the fields, in an epic chase, by a "horde of disheveled females showing all their claws."

Whether Capp used this piece of satire to show his dislike for the independence drive of women or as a starting point for it, is hard to tell. "My job (and the job of all humorists), he once said, "is to keep reminding people that they must not be content with anything."

Considering Capp's suspicion and disrespect for society at that time, he obviously felt strongly about the issue of women's independence. He characterizes particularly the city women as being scheming, superficial, and wanton. He feels that the independence of men should be preserved.

It is, however, ironic that his statement that people should not be content with anything has led to many changes in tradition, not the preserving of them. The role of women in society has changed dramatically since the 1930s to a point where it is not uncommon or unusual for a woman to ask a man out on a date.

The country western theme of the present day dance can be traced back to Li'l Abner's hometown of Dogpatch, U.S.A. The town of Dogpatch was a hillbilly country town which possessed neither electricity nor running water. The town was the setting of Capp's savage satire of American life.

This traditional Sadie Hawkins Dance has gained much popularity over the years. It is an annual event at Carmel High School that is anticipated throughout the school year. It takes a Sadie Hawkins Dance for the guys to feel the pressure of having to answer "Yes" or "No" or the rejection of not being asked at all.

A lot of hard work has been put into the organization of tomorrow's Sadie Hawkins Dance. Thanks to All Capp the tradition now exists, and hopefully will be strong for years to come.

(Editor's Note: Emily Rubin is a senior at Carmel High School where she is the Associated Student Body publicity representative. She plays varsity tennis, basketball and softball. She'll report on Carmel High happenings every other week in these pages.)

Pony up

PONY DIVISION tryouts and sign-ups will be held this Saturday, March 17, from 10 a.m. to noon at the Carmel Middle School Pony baseball field. (To play in this division you must be 13 on or before July 31, 1990 and/or turn 15 on or after Aug. 1, 1990.)

All players — new and returning- MUST try out. Please bring a copy of your birth certificate that we can keep if you are new to the program and/or have not done so before. For more information call Judy Palshaw, Pony director (624-7448), or Karen Huntington, player agent (624-5740).

Ever wonder who's behind the CYB program? In addition to Karen, this year's executive board consists of Karl Pallastrini, president (625-2976); Nan McCauley, vice president (625-0773); Joanne Langslet, secretary (625-9038); and Carol Schock, treasurer (624-2647). Many more hardworking folks comprise the general board — division directors, grants and rules committees, publicity, etc. — to bring a full baseball/softball program to Carmel area kids each season.

Scorekeeping. Every year I encourage people to learn how, but it's more than just a request for volunteers — I really think it's fun! My husband taught me to keep score during a Giants game five years ago, and I was hooked. Since then I've kept score for Bronco division games, softball, socko, "Oldtimers" baseball, even the Bronco World Series in Pacific Grove the summer before last. Scorekeeping focuses my attention and provides a lasting reminder of each game (not everyone remembers games play-by-play weeks — or months — later, as can some hardcore ballplayers I know).

It appeals to the secretary in me, although secretarial skills are NOT required! You don't even have to know much about baseball (I didn't before I started). Scoring can be as simple or as complex as you want to make it — from noting runs scored and outs made, to figuring batting averages and team statistics. Anyway (now here's the pitch for volunteers) — we can always use more scorekeepers! (The Pinto division will not keep score this year.) Please join me at the clinic, Wednesday, March 21, at 7 p.m. in Carmel Middle School room L3.

Tickets are available now from players for our annual pancake breakfast and Opening Day ceremonies (March 24 at Larson Field on Rio Road).

An Enduring Peninsula Presence In An Exciting New Location

Monterey Jaguar, Rolls-Royce, Ferrari has just made the biggest move in its history. After a third of a century across from Lake El Estero in Monterey, we've built a brand new facility at 1711 Del Monte Blvd. in Seaside.

This new extension of the Seaside Auto Center has been designed with you, the customer, in mind. With 600 feet of frontage and two buildings totaling 24,000 square feet, we're able to better showcase the new and preowned collector cars that attract customers from around the world, and to provide you improved parts and service capabilities.

But some things never change at Monterey Jaguar, Rolls-Royce, Ferrari. For you, that means the same courtesy, professionalism and attention to your specific automotive needs. You've come to expect it, and indeed, you deserve it.

We're excited with our new, state-of-the-art facility, and the opportunity to serve you even better than before. We invite you to come out and see for yourself why the only dealership of its kind in the U.S. has just made the greatest leap forward in its history.

Fiestas of food & fun

ALTHOUGH IT is the Ides of March and Easter is one month away, spring is buzzing in the thoughts and hearts of everyone. Fiestas, food and fun filled the calendar last week.

At Chartwell School spring begins with the popular "La Fiesta Primavera"and "Festival '90" was the occasion for the announcement of Chef of The Year.

I was disappointed to find a blank wall instead of the usual array of art by students of Chartwell School at the yearly fund-raiser "La Fiesta Primavera." However, student art was discovered in a different arena.

Brightening the entrance of San Carlos Hall was the "Spring Fiesta '90" design of 10-year-old Shannon Davey. Found on sweatshirts for sale as well as the program covers, Brighter yet were the decorations in the hall. Bundles of balloons, pinatas, and sparkling tortilla chips strewn on the tables, tiny red lights and Mexican straw sombreros openly stashed about. All were the artistic work of Katie Ewen, Nan Heller, Lynn Monnes and Denise Marseguerra.

The bright colors immediately struck a note of gaeity.

Many festive colors were worn by the 300 guests but not as many Mexican costumes as the previous year. However, master of ceremonies Alan Brenner's white outfit was topped with sarape and a sombrero large enough to shade a family of 10.

Silent auction tables were constantly busy. It was difficult to entice Hank Ketchum away for a short picture session and Joan Albert was smitten with the sterling silver tea set that was won (for the evening's top bid), by Tom and Julie Foster.

Peter d'Andrea was seen returning again and again to check his bid on a basket of chocolates. Later he himself was up for auction and Harvey Kilpatrick will invite guests for dinner while Peter takes over in the kitchen; Peter being the star chef at Carmel Valley Ranch Resort.

The hand-carved redwood bench by Tom Ewen will grace the Glenn Leidig home and the Fred Slautterbacks will cruise the Monterey Bay for three hours aboard the Patronilla yacht with friends. Tom and Katie Ewen will roll back the years as they see Paul McCartney at UC Berkeley and Bruce Winge will dine and spend the afternoon with Rusty Areias in Sacramento.

"Best Birthday Ever" went to Jim and Sally Conrad, which will allow a child and 10 best friends an afternoon of lunch, swimming, cake and the best birthday ever. The 1923 Sterling flatware will be used by Maureen Richards.

As lines formed for the Fiesta Buffet catered by Nicola Bianchi the guests sang Happy Birthday to Tom Martinsen and Chartwell board president Harvey Kilpatrick. Harvey made an important announcement — the good news is that a new school facility is in escrow. The building on Pilot Road near the Carmel Valley Community Center will be a more central location, making it more convenient for South County students. The school hopes to be in the Carmel Valley location in September '90.

Christopher Harris (school director), presented a huge cluster of balloons to Harvey as he came to the podium, Harvey asked, "Is this to get me home?"

It has been just a little over a year that Mr. Harris accepted his post and he is pleased with the move to a permanent place for the school and is happy with the progress made to help children who are dyslexic. He said that the younger the better for the students. It is important to assist dyslexics with special tools for learning before self-esteem is damaged.

Mr. Harris introduced the board, the Chartwell faculty, the current and alumni students who served the guests and presented floral bouquets to Fiesta co-chairwomen Helen Ostrom and Susan Wilson. Special recognition went to three board members — Nicki McMahan, Judy Lewis and Jeffener Santee for their "foresight and grassroots work."

With the dedication of this supportive group more students are being accepted and progress is being made. Scholarships have been available in the past and hopefully will continue to be in the future of this fine school.

Good food always brings a festive air to any occasion. So the good guys in the white hats took them off for an evening of fun at "Festival 90 — The 15th Annual President's Ball & Chef of the Year Dinner" to find out who was honored.

That is, all the chefs took off their white toques except for the executive chef at The Inn at Spanish Bay Pascal Rifflart. He and his staff served five courses with South American inspiration from Santiago Topas appetizers to fantastic Copacabana desserts.

Julio Ramirez, president of the MP Chefs Association, welcomed guests and introduced emcee Robert Furter. No more suspense — here is the big news. Beat Giger, executive chef at The Lodge at Pebble Beach, was brought to the podium to receive awards and presentations as "Chef of The Year."

A native of Switzerland, Mr. Giger came to Pebble Beach by way of South America, Florida, Denver and San Francisco, where he received the Chef of the Year Award two years ago.

Sunday evening he received proclamations from Monterey Mayor Dan Albert (representing all local mayors), state Sen. Henry Mello, Rep. Leon Panetta presented by Bert Cutino and Shary Farr, representing her husband Assemblyman Sam Farr.

OLE BLEM, Julio Ramirez and Don Ferch, all former Chef of the Year winners, shown during the social hour at the "Festival '90" dinner at Inn at Spanish Bay.

MARC VEDRINES (owner/chef of Carmel's French Poodle restaurant), Carmen Magnusson and her husband Jon (executive chef at Monterey Peninsula Country Club), and Pierre Coutou (owner of Fish & Basil restaurant), attended the Chef of the Year award dinner.

GASPAR AND Joelle Catanzaro enjoy a rare evening out together at Chef of the Year award dinner. Gaspar is (sadly) headed from his post at the Gold Fork (which he loves), to join the staff at Sardine Factory.

THE RIGHT Rev. Monsignor Brendan McGuiness, who gave the invocation at the Chefs Association dinner, talked with Bert Cutino (co-owner of the Sardine Factory), before dinner.

ELENA STEELE (pastry chef at Ventana), Peter Charles (Ventana executive chef), Orlin Marcus (executive chef at the Beach Club), and Robert Negri (owner of Giuliano's), talked about...food (what else?) at Chef of the Year dinner.

Shary said she wanted to check up to find out what kind of person Beat is and she talked with his staff. She discovered that he is a very nice fellow who treats his staff with respect and consideration. She ended by quoting Virginia Woolf, who said, "One cannot sleep well, love well, without dining well." Well said.

Mr. Furter presented three awards for outstanding service to the MP Chefs Assn. Don Ferch (Chef of the Year last year and association president for two years), was called up first. Second was David Taylor (executive chef at Casa Munras), and then the "Purveyor of the Year" award went to Paul Sandis (who is in the bakery business.)

Former Chef of The Year honorees attending were Marc Vedrines, Alfred Furter, Gernot Leitzinger, Bert Cutino, Julio Ramirez, John Romano, Ole Blem and Don Ferch. Cynthia Kaiser and Terry Teplitzky were chairpersons for the annual dinner.

FUTUREDATES OF Note: Our very own (or he use to be), Fred Dame is coming back to enlighten us with a discourse on "tasting the master's way" at a gourmet dinner at the Monterey Plaza on March 17. Everyone will end up with invaluable bits of info from one of 12 Master Sommeliers. It is called "Chardonnay Barrel Tasting Dinner" sponsored by the Monterey Wine Country Associates. Frank Jerant is president and Carmel's Cary Gott is treasurer. This is a kick-off for the big Monterey Wine Festival which begins the following night at the aquarium. Contact Armanasco Public Relations, Monterey.

"Quiet Light" settles in at the Thunderbird when photographer John Sexton comes to sign his book by the same name. Joining him are Colin Fletcher and James Alinder (director of Friends of Photography for 10 years and formerly from Pebble)...On the 21st Joshua Wesson will be guest speaker for a Thunderbird's "Talk & Tasting Luncheon," ($14 advance reservations required).

Reg Henry, editor of the Herald newspaper, will speak at the Carmel Woman's Club on March 19th at 2 p.m. and will answer questions at the end of his talk before tea is served.

American Association of University Women holds its March meeting on the 20th at 7 p.m., Casa Estrada, Monterey. Topic of discussion is "Teen Pregnancy," with panelists Holly White, Lynne Dinidir, Pat Wilson and two teen mothers.

Also on the 20th, Maestro Clark Suttle gives a Monterey County Symphony Preview at Del Mesa Carmel at 2 p.m. with tea served at 3. And that evening at 6:45 Betsy Tumelson talks on "Today's Actions — Tomorrow's History" at the Professional Women's Network meeting at the Community Room, Crossroads. Guests are welcome.

A benefit dinner for the American Red Cross of Monterey County will be held March 23 at the Sardine Factory. Adding to the fun for the evening are celebrity waiters Leon Panetta, Henry Mello, Rusty Areias, Sam Farr, Eric Seastrand and Judge William Wunderlich. Gives people a chance to mingle with elected officials in a relaxed, festive atmosphere and provides good works of the Red Cross at the same time. $60 pp for a four-course dinner with Monterey County wines served.

If you are going south you may wish to stop by the Monterey County Agricultural & Rural Life Museum in King City before the end of April. The "Writing On the Wall" exhibit of posters between 1941-44 of women in the work force, patriotism, the Victory Home, ration books and USO dances will be on display.

By D. Patrick Gallagher

The Irish Brigades

IRELAND'S RECURRENT rebellions against English rule resulted in the flight from her shores of many fugitives. Most famous among these were the Ulster Earls of Tyrone and Tyrconnell, the O'Neills and the O'Donnells.

Along with clans to the south, they reduced the English control of Ireland to a few coastal towns, so that for many years England ruled Ireland in name only. The provice of Ulster long harbored the fiercest resistance to Queen Elizabeth I's attempts to convert Ireland to the Protestant religion, and when James II, the last Catholic monarch in England, fought the Protestant ascendancy for his throne, it was to Catholic Ireland and Tyrconnell he turned for assistance. That assistance incurred a heavy price. James' defeat resulted in the "Flight of the Earls," the first great exodus of fugitive Irishmen from their homeland.

As political fugitives in the 16th century, these Irish fled to the continent, where their military prowess was enlisted by monarchs in Spain, Austria and France. There they were formed into brigades made up entirely of Irish exiles, where they won honors on the field of battle, were widely regarded as some of the best of Europe's soldiers, and on occasion found themselves once again facing their old antagonists.

The most famous of these occasions was at Fontenoy in 1745, in the War of the Austrian Succession. The English and Hanoverian forces were aligned against the French and as the English troops (1st Grenadier Guards) approached, advancing up a hill, Lt. Col. Lord Charles Hay stepped forward from the front ranks, so legend has it, took out a flask, raised it in salute to the French Household troops, and declared, "We are the English Guards, and hope you will stand until we come up to you, and not swim the Schledt as you did the Main at Dettingen." Cheers rang out from both sides, the English advanced and at thirty paces the French fired. The murderous fusillade did not halt the attack and the French were driven from their positions, the flank turned and an English victory was at hand.

Suddenly there was the sound of bagpipes and from the crest of the hill, emerald banners flying in the breeze, the Irish Brigade of the French Army descended upon the English Guards, driving them back down the hill and across the river. It was a total rout and Lord Cumberland, the English commander, watching from an opposite hill as the Irish Brigade swept into action, exclaimed, "God's curse on the laws that made those men our enemies." Michael Kelly, the brigade's commander, called after the fleeing English, recalling previous victories in Ireland, "We are the Irish Brigade who drove you from Enniskillin and Omagh. Remember our name." Such were the "heroics" of ancient warfare. When darkness fell, Cumberland withdrew his forces down the road to Brussels in defeat.

The rebellions in Ireland in the 18th and 19th centuries, the religious persecution and the Great Famine drove literally millions more Catholic Irish from their homeland to Australia (often as political prisoners), and to New Zealand, Canada and the United States. Once again their ability as soldiers created more Irish Brigades.

In the United States Civil War, the Irish Brigade was one of the most highly decorated units in the Union Army. It comprised the 29th Massachusetts, the 116th Pennsylvania and the 63rd, 69th and 88th New York Infantry Regiments, and was Irish to a man. The brigade had three emerald green banners embroidered with a gold harp, a shamrock and a sunburst, and was commanded by Brig. Gen. Thomas F. Meagher, himself a fugitive leader of the 1848 Irish rebellion. Meagher had been imprisoned in Australia by the English, escaped and came to America. The fact that England supported the South was enough to send him into the Union cause and with the help of Archbishop Hughes of New York, he raised the Irish Brigade. The Archbishop himself had presented the brigade its flags at a grand march in front of his residence. The Irish were assigned to Bull Sumner's corps and Bruce Catton, the Civil War historian, says whenever Sumner went into action his first question was "Where are my green flags?"

In the "bloodiest day of the war," at Sharpsburg in the Battle of Antietam, McClellan called out his pet brigade when Gen. French's troops were driven back by Lee's Army of Northern Virginia. The brigade swung into action, its green banners snapping, and met the Confederate advance head on, stopping it cold. The resulting fire fight was so hot that Meagher knew his brigade must either advance or retreat, but remaining in the open field was impossible.

Catton writes, "...and then he (Meagher) stood in his stirrups and shouted 'Raise the colors and follow me.' The green flags went tossing up and the Irishmen charged again...and the Rebels slowly fell back into the sunken road..."

The brigade was reduced to 500 men that day and when finally relieved, Catton describes their departure from the field.

"Still under fire, they marched to the rear in columns as orderly as if they were on the drill field..."

McClellan watched with tears in his eyes. At Fredericksburg, Chancellorsville and Gettysburg the Brigade fought with characteristic courage, its emerald banners creating confidence among other troops. "Looking for a fight?" asked Gen. McClellan of an arriving regiment at Gettysburg. "Follow the Irish," he told them. When positioned opposite the Confederacy's Irish troops, Mahone's Regiment and Cobb's Legion, the soldiers of both sides often mingled, exchanging newspapers and the latest word from Ireland. Unfortunately, when the battle renewed, they fought each other with unflinching determination.

In 1917, the all-Irish "Fighting 69th" Regiment would go into the First World War with its famous chaplain Father Francis Patrick Duffy and its commander, Fordham's future football coach, Major Frank Cavanaugh, and Harry Truman would command an all-Irish artillery battery from Kansas City, but those would be among the last of the ethnic and geographically segregated regiments in the US Army.

One other all-Irish unit should be noted. In the War with Mexico, Irish soldiers in the American Army became disenchanted with the prospect of serving a Protestant, industrial nation in its subjugation of a Catholic, agrarian nation. For these recent immigrants, it was too much a parallel to England and Ireland. They deserted in significant numbers to fight on the Mexican side in the Saint Patrick's Battalion. Today, in Mexico City, there is a monument downtown filled with Irish names in memory of those who were captured and shot by the US for desertion. Irish names are still to be found among prominent Mexican families resulting from those members of the battalion who were not captured and who made their home in Mexico after the war.

France and Spain also have a number of prominent families of Irish descent (the Spanish Dukes of Tetuan, for example, are O'Donnells). Two of the better known names in America have brought us Hennessey cognac from France and Carlos O'Brien beer from Mexico. Have a happy Saint Patrick's Day, Saturday.

Members of the bean family manufacture their own nitrogen that enriches the soil around them. Planting beans in sandy tracts will enable other plants to thrive there as well.

Local boy makes good

THE INDEPENDENT Insurance Agents and Brokers of the Monterey Peninsula have announced the election of Carmel Valley resident Chuck Veatch as association president for the coming year.

During the past two years, Veatch served as the organization's vice president and has been a board member for more than six years.

Veatch, who lives in the valley with wife Eula Mae, is a member of the Carmel Foundation, treasurer of the Church of the Wayfarer and is closely associated with the Carmel Bach Festival.

Joining Veatch as new officers are vice president Don Pendlay of S. Don Pendlay & Associates of Monterey and secretary/treasurer Chris Spaulding of Brown-Spaulding & Associates in Carmel.

The remaining new board members are Sandy Rose of Picetti & Anderson; Matt Allaire of Allaire Insurance; Tom Gowing of Oceanview Insurance Services and past president Larry Durocher of Monterey Insurance Agencies in Monterey.

Meeting of note... The Dolores Street Business Breakfast Club of Carmel has slated a meeting for 8 a.m. Monday, March 26, in the Victorian Room of the Pine Inn.

Scheduled guests include Stephen Sanders of Scottsdale, Ariz. and Robert Franco of Endorphin Productions.

For further information contact Victoria Macy at Stefan Mann Luggage. Phone 625-2998 or 625-2609.

Even Though It's Not a Carmel Business, We Thought You'd Want to Know Dept.... Donald J. Glidewell, CPA, owner of D.J. Glidewell & Co., is offering tax clients electronic filing — a high-tech way to receive a refund in a relatively short period of time.

For the first time, the Internal Revenue Service is making electronic filing available in all 50 states.

"By filing electronically, a client doesn't have to wait while the IRS goes thorugh the time-consuming barrage of paperwork," says Glidewell. "We send the completed return to the IRS via our computer which goes directly onto their computer. This process bypasses the sorting and key punching phase a mailed return goes through, which is what causes the typical six- to eight-week waiting period."

Glidewell claims that he can get clients a refund in just three short weeks.

MP Chamber news... The 1990 Spring Trade Fair and Business Mixer, sponsored by the Monterey Peninsula Chamber of Commerce and Visitors Convention Bureau, has been scheduled for Thursday, April 26, at the Monterey Conference Center.

The fair will run from 4:30 to 8 p.m. and showcase about 120 peninsula businesses.

Also, the chamber has been named an accredited organization by the U.S. Chamber of Commerce.

Only about 10 percent of chambers from nationwide receive such an honor.

The 1,400-member peninsula chamber was cited as an organization that meets high standards of performance in planning and programming and in conducting a well-balanced and productive program of work.

Give yourselves a laurel and hardy pat on the back for a job well done.

The more it stays the same dept... American International Golf Resorts maintains that it has no major changes planned for Carmel Valley Ranch Resort, which it is purchasing for $60 million from Landmark Land Co. of Carmel.

Escrow is set to close in two months on the 100-room hotel, golf course and tennis club.

Landmark officials, whose subsidiary Oak Tree Savings Bank owns the property, have indicated that the deal is directly tied to divestiture required under the 1989 federal bailout of the nation's S & Ls, which mandates that S & Ls get out of real estate development and back to home loans.

As of this report, Carmel Valley Ranch Resort management will remain the same.

PLANNING AHEAD

Information and involvement

IN AN effort to encourage public involvement and to better disseminate information to the public and citizens, the Department of Community Planning and Building has decided to write a column for the Carmel Pine Cone.

The topics of these columns will include information on design, safety, and regulations that play an important role in the community. Examples of proposed articles will include: zoning (R-1), subordinate units, exterior design changes, lighting, licensing, and an array of other information. Today I'd like to cover the importance of business licensing.

HOW OFTEN are local, state, and federal agencies asking for money? You know — IRS, FICA, FIT, SDI, etc? If it's not a tax, then it's a fee or license. Let's take a moment to focus on a very important item: the business license.

Not much positive thought is given to the business license by the community. However, one of the main features of licensing is protection. Protection in the form of regulation — the regulation and administration of the types and numbers of businesses.

The City of Carmel-by-the-Sea uses licensing as a means of "knowing" who is in town, the type of business being operated, and providing security for the homeowner and consumer. Here are a couple of examples:

A person opens a shop on Ocean Avenue. The person's business involves the sale and distribution of a video and a membership for a franchise. Background checks are not made since there are no licensing provisions. No local agency is monitoring the operation. Several interested people pay monies to this person. Soon after, this person departs and is never heard from again. Unfortunately, this was fraud.

A group of individuals drive up to a house on San Antonio and unload several rakes and shovels. To passersby, these individuals look like gardeners. The homeowners are away on vacation. A short time later, these individuals, the equipment they brought, and the valuables in the home are gone. This is an example of what could happen in a community with no licensing requirements.

In the City of Carmel-by-the-Sea, however, these provisions exist. These are just a couple of drastic examples of what could happen without the enforcement of licensing regulations. There are other possibilities, too.

Some positive points of licensing are community interaction, verification of compliance with city regulations, monitoring of waste recycling, and maintenance of fire safety.

If you have any suggestions please write to this department; we encourage your participation:

AIDS companions/advocates needed

The Monterey County AIDS Project (MCAP) is seeking individuals interested in becoming companions/advocates to persons living with Acquired Immune Deficiency Sydrome (AIDS) or AIDS-Related Complex (ARC).

This 40-hour training will take place in Monterey on April 28-30 and May 4-6. Volunteers who complete the training will be prepared to offer emotional and practical support, peer counseling and one-on-one advocacy and companionship.

Training will also include social service issues and community resources for people with AIDS and ARC. Minorities and bilingual persons are encouraged to apply. There is a $75 tax-deductible contribution requested for the training. This covers books, training materials, speakers and food. Scholarships are available.

For additional information, call 394-4747.

LATIN AMERICAN SPECIALIST TO GIVE TALK AT MIIS

Dr. Cathy Schneider, assistant professor of international policy studies at the Monterey Institute of International Studies (MIIS), will lecture on "Chile: The Transition to Democracy" at the Monterey Institute's S.F.B. Morse Auditorium on Wednesday, March 21, at 12:15 p.m. The lecture is part of the Institute's Public Events Series and is free to the public.

Schneider, who has recently returned from Chile, will be speaking one week after the inauguration of the first democratic government in Chile after 16 years of military rule. She will address the implications of this transition for the future of democracy in Chile.

Schneider received her doctorate in government from Cornell University. She is the author of The Mobilization at the Grassroots: Shantytowns and Resistance in Authoritarian Chile (Temple University Press, forthcoming), and numerous articles on Chile and the urban poor in Latin America. She has made many trips to Chile since 1975 and conducted field research in Santiago's shantytowns from 1985 to 1987.

The Harmonic Steel Band will play in the Grand Ballroom with a journey through Bongo Bars and Culinary Camps serving Tanzania tidbits, Serengeti Salads, Nairobi Noodles, Sahara Stir-fry, and Beer and Boar Botswana. Following the auction there will be "Swahili Sweets" and dancing to the music of the Sid Thompson Band.

The proceeds of this event will benefit the students of Robert Louis Stevenson School.

VETERAN NEWSMAN TO SPEAK MARCH 19

"What in the World Is Going On?" will be the question for veteran news analyst William Winter when he speaks at the New Forum luncheon Monday, March 19, at Pebble Beach Lodge.

Now editor of a bi-weekly newsletter, William Winter Comments, he was formerly a news analyst for CBS-radio and broadcast news comments for Voice of America (VOA).

At University of California, Berkeley, he lectures to large classes on "Today's World Headlines: An In-Depth Interpretation." He has appeared as visiting lecturer on world affairs at universities from Yale to Columbia and the University of Washington, as well as universities in Australia, India, and the Philippines.

Winter has been honored by governments in Africa, Europe and Australia, and was given the coveted Legion of Honor by Philippines President Ramon Magsaysay in 1956 for his wartime broadcasts.

Now in his 70s, he began daily news analysis for CBS radio in 1941 after a decade of law practice.

He is especially noted for the simple language in which he talks about the intricacies of politics, economics and social problems.

Reservations for Winter's talk can be made by calling 625-9967 or writing P.O. Box 22214, Carmel 93922.

Wine Festival.

Sponsored by the Monterey Wine Country Associates (MWCA), the gala event will be held in the Grand Ballroom of the Monterey Plaza Hotel. The evening will begin in dramatic fashion, with each participating winery featuring and tasting a barrel of chardonnay from the 1989 harvest.

Master Sommelier Fred Dame, director of on-premise marketing for The Seagram Classics Wine Co. and one of only 12 American master sommeliers, will begin the evening with a discourse on "Tasting the Master's Way." At the gourmet dinner that follows, foods will be served to complement champagne, pinot noir and cabernet sauvignon. As each variety is served, a master of wine will discuss its origins and particular qualities.

"The intent of the Barrel Tasting Dinner is to provide guests with an exciting venue in which to taste the wines of Monterey Wine Country, and to demonstrate Monterey Wine Country's place in the world of quality wines," said Frank Jerant, president of MWCA.

All guests at the dinner will receive a gift pack including a bottle of Monterey Wine Country wine as well as a corkscrew and glasses bearing the MWCA logo.

Tickets to the Monterey Wine Country Associates' Barrel Tasting Dinner are $75 per person. For more information contact David Armanasco, president, Armanasco Public Relations, 303 Webster St., Monterey, CA 93940; 372-2259.

CARMEL PLANNERS ATTEND DESIGN REVIEW CONFERENCE

Four members of the Carmel Planning Commission, plus two staff members, attended a two-day conference in San Diego last week.

More than 135 planning commissioners, planning staff members, architects and attorneys from 20 states and Canada were in attendance. The Carmel contingent included Planning Commissioners Ed Hicks, Jack Kennedy, Stephen Poohar and Terry Thomas, plus Planning Director Diane White and Associate Planner Brian Roseth.

Sponsored by the American Institute of Certified Planners, the program featured study sessions led by authorities on Design Review and Architectural Preservation. Much of the program was devoted to bringing the attendees up to date on new approaches to architectural controls and design review procedures used by cities around the country. Sessions included discussion of public design guidelines, led by Gary Hack, Professor of Urban Design at Massachusetts Institute of Technology, and the legal aspects of design review, chaired by attorney Jerold S. Kayden, a member of the Lincoln Institute of Land Policy in Cambridge, Mass.

Commissioners Hicks and Kennedy, who also serve on Carmel's Design Review Committee, reported that the conference will enable them to apply the latest approaches to new applications coming before the committee.

FIREFIGHTER OF YEAR WINNERS ANNOUNCED

The eighth Annual Firefighter of the Year Awards were held March 2. Three firefighters were honored: Paid Firefighter of the Year - David Gasperson, Salinas City Fire Dept.; Volunteer Firefighter of the Year - Brian Smith, Mid-Carmel Valley FPD; Support Firefighter of the Year - Vickie Ford, Arroyo Seco Volunteer FD.

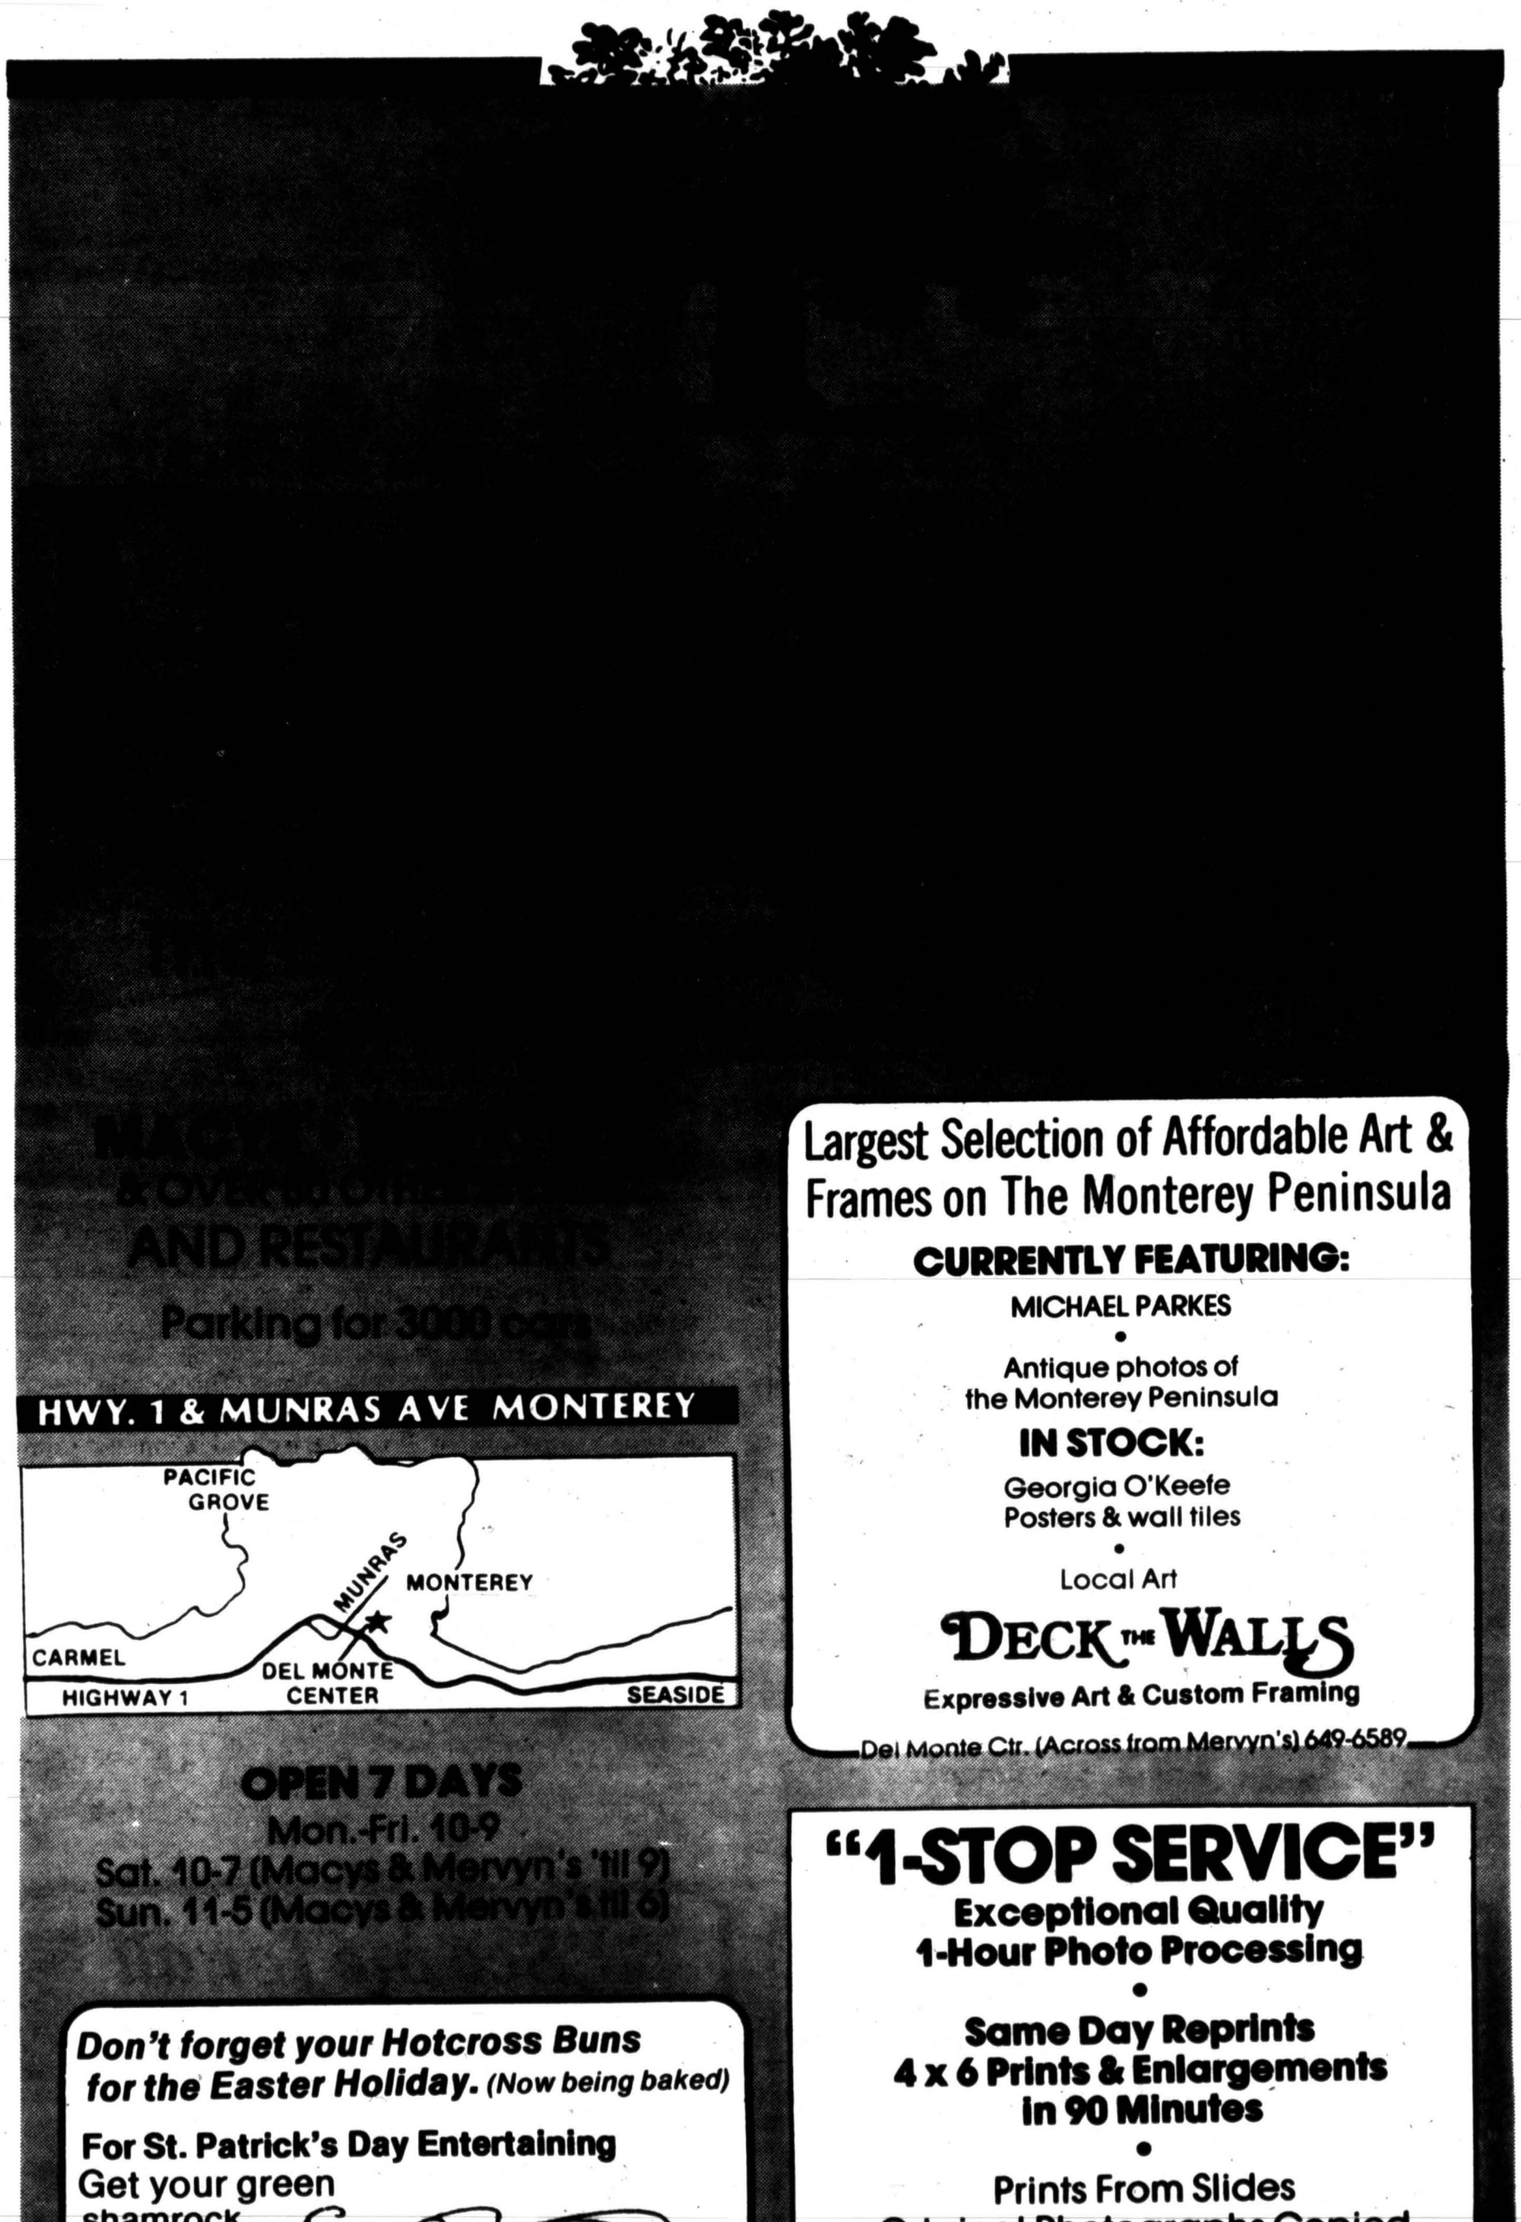
Smith, a volunteer with Mid-Carmel Valley Fire Protection District for seven years has been very active with the fire district. He served a term as a director on the district's board of directors while maintaining active volunteer status. He was an EMT IA before becoming a volunteer and has maintained his certification, recently adding Early Defribrillation certification. He has taken six of the California Fire Service Training and Education System, volunteer fire officer courses and plans to receive his Volunteer Fire Officer certification. He has seen action as a fire officer on many responses, including the infamous Pebble Beach Fire. Smith is also active with Volunteers in Action which generates funds for community volunteer programs.

Ford, a support person with the Arroyo Seco Volunteer Fire Co., has been active since founding of the group in 1982. She has been a tireless worker for the volunteer fire company dispatching and serving on every fund-raiser of the fire company. Fund-raisers are the primary source of income for this volunteer group. Vickie also lends kind words when needed and suggests improvements if noted. She has become a very important part of the volunteer fire company.

TRANSIT AGENCY ELECTS NEW OFFICERS

At their regular meeting on Feb. 12, the Monterey-Salinas Transit (MST) Board of Directors elected a new chairman and vice-chairman to a 12-month term. Russell M. Jeffries, mayor of the City of Salinas, was selected as board chairman. He had previously served as vice-chairman for the agency. Elected to the position of vice-chairman was Karin Strasser Kauffman, Monterey County 5th District supervisor.

Monterey-Salinas Transit, a public transit provider, is a joint powers agency composed of eight member jurisdictions and which services Northern Monterey County. A representative from each member jurisdiction sits on the board of directors.



OBITUARIES

Lillian Grabow

Lillian Grabow, a former Carmel resident, died March 1 in San Francisco. She was 87.

Mrs. Grabow, known to her friends as Lil, was born March 2, 1903, in Maywood, Ill. She was active in the Carmel Foundation and worked in the organization's luncheon program.

She is survived by two sons, Robert and Donald, both of San Francisco; a daughter, Ruth Ann Trethway of Cupertino; two grandchildren; and two sisters who reside in Illinois.

Memorial services will be held at a later date. Interment will take place in New Hope, Pa.

The family suggests any memorial contributions be sent to the Carmel Foundation.

David G. Lane

Funeral services took place at the Church of the Good Shepherd in Hemet, for the Rev. David G. Lane, a retired Episcopal priest and former resident and frequent visitor to the Monterey Peninsula, who died Feb. 26 in Hemet. He was 76.

Born Dec. 13, 1913 in Mar Vista, he lived in Pacific Grove and Carmel from 1954 to 1965 and was a member and former vestryman of St. Mary's by-the-Sea Episcopal Church in Pacific Grove.

His wife, Sybil, is a former teacher at All Saints Episcopal Day School in Carmel Valley and former director of religious education at St. Mary's.

After a 30-year career in business with the NAFI division of Chris-Craft Corp. in Monterey, Rev. Lane graduated from the Church Divinity School of the Pacific in 1965 and served as a priest and vicar at Episcopal mission churches in the Oregon communities of Monmouth, Roseburg and Dallas.

At the time of his retirement he was vicar of the Church of the Resurrection in Eugene, Ore.

In addition to his wife, Rev. Lane is survived by a son, Ronald of Modesto, and a sister, Lucille DeWitt of Huntington Beach.

Miller-Jones Mortuary in Hemet was in charge of arrangements.

The family suggests that any memorial contributions be sent to St. Mary's by-the-Sea Episcopal Church of the Hospice of the Central Coast.

Seniors program needs participants

In September 1987 the Carmel-by-the-Sea Police Department began a program to benefit senior citizens of the community in two ways.

First, senior citizens who live alone and are often "shut-in" their residences with little or no contact with friends or relatives, can be provided with the security of knowing that someone does truly care about their welfare. Also, those concerned with their physical well-being will have someone to check on them daily.

Second, seniors interested in participating in some type of community program will be able to work with those in their own peer group by volunteering to place these daily telephone calls to the recipients of the program.

Currently, the department has a full staff of volunteers, however, anyone wishing to be placed on an alternate list to fill in when another caller is unable to make it or is away on vacation, is encouraged to call for information.

FATHER FARRELL'S WISDOM

The road to good intentions

From the March 25, 1982
Carmel Pine Cone

Gilbert Keith Chesterton is a favorite of mine, a brilliant English writer, wit, philosopher and Christian apologist. He had a monumental brain but in practical matters, he had the short memory of the proverbial absent-minded professor.

One morning, he left his home in Beaconsfield, Buckinghamshire, to give an evening lecture. At noon, he wired his wife, "I am at Bishop's Stortsford in Hertfordshire. Where am I supposed to be?" She wired back, "Home." Then she told her housekeeper that it would be easier to get him home from Bishop's Stortsford than it would be to get him from there to where he was supposed to be.

If Chesterton was alive today, he no doubt would tell us that as good men and as Rotarians, we need to come home to have moral principles and then set out in a better direction.

In many of our goals this would be easier than attempting to get from where we are to where we ought to go.

In the early days of California, there was a well marked road — El Camino Real — the King's Highway. Keep us, Oh Lord, on that Royal Road marked so well by the principles of Rotary service to others above self.

When I wrote this prayer, it seemed to make sense, but now I wonder. So Lord, please give it the meaning I intended, for we do know what road is paved with good intentions. Amen.

The Golden Years

By Myles Williams

Photography genius Alfred Eisenstaedt provides an example of a senior citizen who did not let age interfere with his career. Born in Germany in 1898, he served in World War I, recovered from wounds, became a button salesman, but didn't do well at it. So at age 31 he turned photography from a hobby into fulltime work. In 1935 he left Nazi-dominated Germany for the United States, in time to become one of four original staff photographers of Life magazine. Even into his 90s he said he can't wait to start each day. He even joked that in his next life, he'd like to be a photographer.

People 65 or over and those who are blind or disabled may be eligible for Supplemental Security Income. The program helps those who have very little or no income and whose cash, goods and property fall within specified value levels. The maximum monthly Federal benefit is $368 for an individual and $553 for a couple. In most states, SSI recipients also receive free health benefits under Medicaid. The program is run by the Social Security Administration.

CRITIC AT LARGE

By Mac McDonald

Excitable boy

THE CATALYST in Santa Cruz celebrates its 14th anniversary with a kickin' Saint Paddy's Day celebration featuring the Excitable Boy himself, Warren Zevon.

The festivities get off to a rousing start at 9:30 p.m. with The Shell Boys, featuring popular Santa Cruz rockers Ken Kraft and Bob O'Neill (of the late and oft-resurrected Snail), and up-and-coming Celtic-influenced (though they hail from the East Coast) rockers Raindogs.

Though he hasn't had a genuine hit since his Werewolves of London several years ago, Zevon still cranks out intelligent, hard-hitting albums, such as his excellent, but sadly overlooked Sentimental Hygiene of a couple of years ago and his latest Transverse City, which is brimming with songs that sizzle, but probably won't make a dent in the "safe and sane" pop charts these days.

Zevon isn't for all tastes, but if you like hard-nosed rock with brains, this is the man for you. He also usually brings with him a crack back-up band featuring the top session and touring players based in LA.

Not to be missed.

SPEAKING OF local boys, if you have a little wanderlust, you might think of driving to San Francisco and taking in modern rockers Lovers and Strangers at the Paradise Lounge Friday, March 16.

This will be the fifth time that the boys have played there — no mean feat for a bunch of guys from the Monterey Peninsula. So reports Pat Sippel. Who she? Why she's a member of the Carmel Recreation Commission and happens to be mother of Strangers' guitarist Steve Sippel and one of the band's biggest fans (along with his dad of course). Mom and pop can be seen at virtually every one of the band's shows, even the ones out of town. She's also a rabid (or is that avid?) SF Giants fan, so at least she has her priorities straight.

She reports that the band will also be appearing March 23 at Cancun restaurant in The Crossroads Friday, March 23, and at Doc Ricketts on Cannery Row Tuesday, March 27. They're also in the recording studio working on their next release, a follow-up to their excellent four-song tape they distributed a few years back.

Isn't it nice to have a PR agent you can trust?

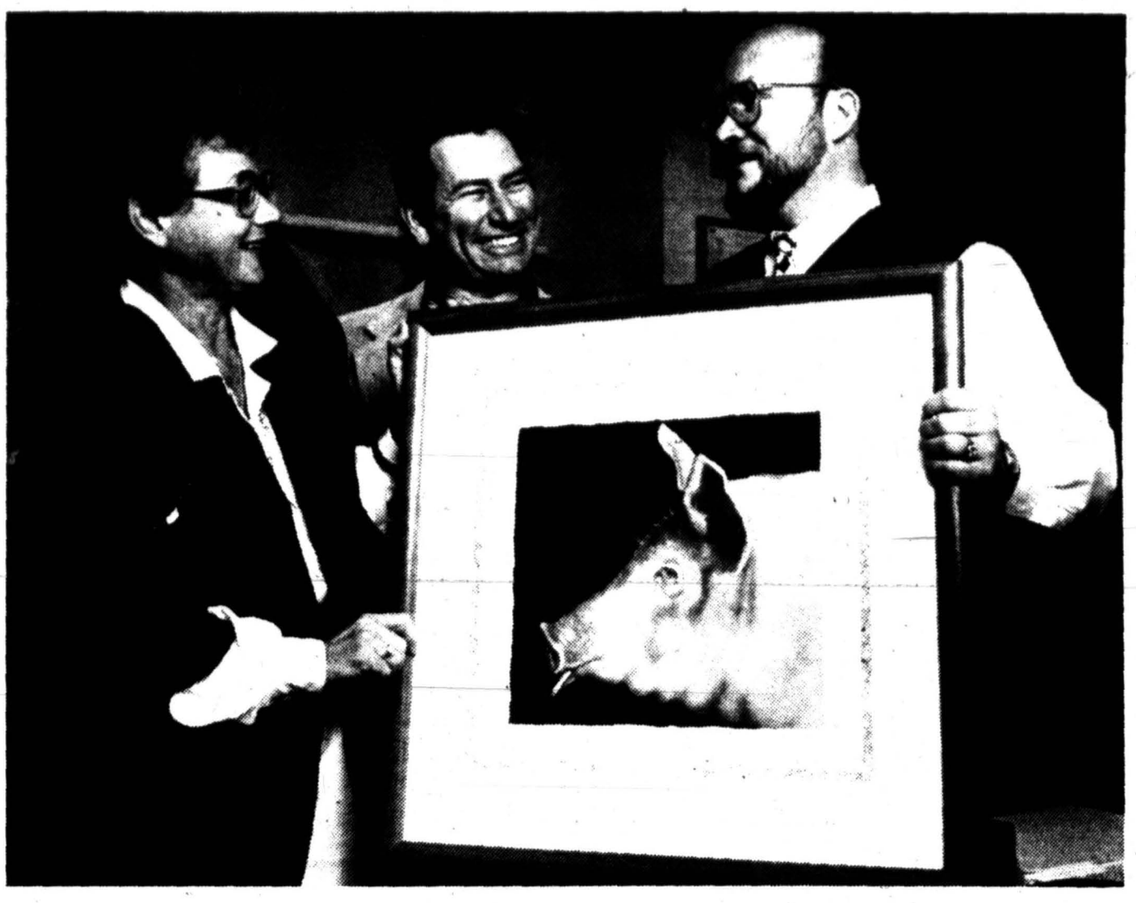
THE BARNYARD



ARE THEY laughing at "Smoked Ham?" The "Ham" in question looks dubious as Beacon House Art Auction Committee Chairman Betsy Brown (left) of Pebble Beach, artist Will Bullas of Carmel and Beach House Board member, Dr. Michael Weir (right) of Monterey enjoy a recent meeting in preparation for this year's benefit. (Photographs by Alan McEwen).

WEIR AND Brown admire two of the sculptures to be auctioned at this year's benefit for the Pacific Grove chemical dependency program. The sculptures, Recovery by Kris Swanson of Carmel Valley (left), and Tide Pool by Carmel artist Wah Chang, are two of more than 50 artworks to be presented for bid on Saturday, March 17 at Rancho Canada Golf and Country Club.

31st annual art auction benefits Beacon House

THE 31ST ANNUAL Beacon House Art Auction arrives Saturday, March 17. The auction is a favorite event for art collectors who can indulge their passion for art while simultaneously providing support for the peninsula's oldest facility for chemical dependence recovery.

Past auctions have garnered donations from such notables as Gus Arriola, Edna Bullock, Carol Chapman, Dick Crispo, Shirley Holt, Gordon Mortensen, Mary Titus, Miguel Dominguez and Hank Ketchum.

Once again, the festivities will take place at Rancho Canada Golf and Country Club. The evening begins with a silent auction at 5 p.m. featuring contributions from local businesses — dinners, clothing, arts and antiques. Dinner is at 7, with the live art auction beginning at 8 p.m.

The committee members wish everyone to know that although invitations are being sent to past participants, an invitation isn't a requirement. The evening is open to all interested persons and anyone wishing to attend may call Beacon House for information.

This event is the annual major fundraising activity for Beacon House. The program has been providing affordable alcohol and other drug recovery services for men and women of Monterey County for the past 32 years. Beacon House is totally funded by fees for service and fundraisers like the Art Auction and the Monterey Bay Ten K — Run for the Beacon.

For reservations, call 372-2334 or 625-9300.

MUSIC CORNER

By Nathalie Plotkin

Carmel Music Society honors young violinist

QI-XIN PU, a 21-year-old graduate of the Shanghai Conservatory and currently a full scholarship student at USC, is the $1,500 Grand Prize Winner of the 14th annual Carmel Music Society Competition. The Awards Concert held Saturday night in Sunset Theater after a day of live final auditions for eight of the original 32 entrants, was employed to display the talents and ability of the three prize winners to an appreciative audience. The competition was established to encourage young artists living and working in California and to give them performance experience.

Necessarily a Grand Prize Winner must have a dimension of mature musicianship, as well as the technical facility which obviously is basic for any competition entrant. Since an appearance as part of the next season's regular subscription series is part of the Grand Prize, the performer must also be able to present and sustain a full scale recital program.

Violinist Qi-Xin Pu promises well to fulfill this requirement. While in the Ravel "Tzigane" he did not create the Romany ambiance of its title, his technical command of the material was distinctly superior. He was a rather wistful sounding gypsy fiddler, playing with accuracy rather than elan. Camille Olaeta was his excellent accompanist.

The "Sarabande" from the Bach "Unaccompanied Sonata No. 4" on the other hand, was a thing of beauty. Pu captured the linear elegance of the music with a singing tone and an authoritative bow arm.

His performance of the Paganini "Witches Dance" was a glittering tour de force. He ran the gamut of the violinistic excesses Paganini always incorporated into his compositions with great aplomb, using every facet of his highly developed virtuoso technique to perfection. The left hand pizzicato was breathtakingly executed and the many passages in harmonics were positively hair-raising in their purity. I look forward to a full fledged recital from this fine young artist next year.

Second Prize Winner cellist Rowena Hamill at the age of 27, is a mature artist who is teaching and playing in the Los Angeles area. The Bach "Prelude" was played gracefully, but the tone had a cameo-sized quality, an effect which was further emphasized in the first movement of the Franck "Violin Sonata" transcribed for cello. As it worked out, the small cello tone was easily overwhelmed when accompanist Jeanine Jacobson's piano volume rose.

Miss Hamill's interpretation was sensitive and poetic and the playing was clean and polished. Ginastera's "Pampeana No. 2" was evocative and colorful, but here too the instrument seemed unresponsive to the artist's efforts.

The Third Prize winner was the 22-year-old alto saxophonist William Wilson who is a senior, majoring in performance at CSU Northridge. He is a fine musician who handles his potentially bumptious instrument as the woodwind it is supposed to be, rather than the brass that less aware players make of it. Movements from a Handel violin sonata were performed with an almost vocal tone quality, well shaped phrasing and carefully modulated dynamics.

"Improvisation I" by Noda, a Japanese saxophonist and composer, was idiomatic and flavorful. The writing was sympathetic and the effect was atmospheric and haunting. Movements from a concerto by Tomasi, a modern French composer, were also very well done, displaying Wilson's tonal awareness, dexterity and excellent playing technique. His fine accompanist was Akiko Sakai.

Returning to play the solo recital which is part of the Grand Prize, last year's Competition Winner Bryan Verhoye will appear on Saturday, April 7 in Sunset Theater.

VIOLINIST QI-Xin Pu, a graduate of Shanghai Conservatory, won the $2,500 grand prize in the Carmel Music Society's Intrumental Competition.

COMPETITION CHAIR Nancy Doolittle joins Kent Nagano, director of the Berkeley Symphony and of France's Opera de Lyon. Maestro Nagano served on the Carmel Music Society panel of judges with George Barati and Andor Toth. The instrumental competition took place Saturday, March 10 at Sunset Theater in Carmel.

JAZZ TIDES

By John Detro

JOY: The San Francisco non-profit called Jazz in the City (JITC) makes a wondrous announcement. Duke Ellington's Concert of Sacred Music will be offered at Grace Cathedral on his April birth anniversary (4/29). This important work premiered there a quarter century ago.

JITC's sponsoring. Son Mercer Ellington will lead the famed orchestra. And two of the original Sacred Concert soloists — tap dancer Bunny Briggs, gospel singer Jimmy McPhail — pledge their participation. Performances at 4:00 and 7:30. Ticketmaster; hurry.

Readers have asked whether a certain JITC event would be repeated this year. Now comes the answer. Time and place of the next Stride Piano Summit — June 15 at Davies Hall. Returning will be keyboard adepts Ralph Sutton, Dick Hyman, Jay McShann, Mike Lipskin.

That's not all. The house band for the occasion will feature Sweets Edison on trumpet and bassist Red Callender.

Public response encourages JITC to bring back the Jazz Tap Summit with Bunny, Sandman Sims, Steve Condos, Honi Coles (doubling as MC). Also during June (6/22-23) at Davies.

As long as we're pondering off-peninsula developments, let it be noted that Kimball's East (Emeryville showcase) makes known a new policy. Latin headliners will be booked monthly — and Tuesday nights'll spotlight regional salsa bands. So far these stars have signed: Willie Colon (3/15-18), Celia Cruz and Tito Puente (5/30-6/3), Ray Barretto (7/4-8), Eddie Palmieri (8/22-26).

Kimball's in San Francisco promises the Frank Morgan Quartet (3/21-24) and the hot Harper Brothers (3/28-31). Outstanding vocalist and pianist Shirley Horn works there next month (4/25-28).

Monster percussionist Trilok Gurtu will play behind guitarist John McLaughlin at Yoshi's in Oakland (3/21-25). Kai Eckhardt on bass. And it's an April booking for James Moody (4/25-28).

Carlos Santana joins the long entertainment lineup of Bay Area Music Awards on Saturday night (3/17) at San Francisco Civic Auditorium. Robert Cray will be among presenters during this 13th annual Bammies hoedown.

FRESH TUNES — Songwriter-guitarist J.J. Cale has a new album in the marketplace. See column for his story of unexpected success. Will Wallace shot this portrait just before San Francisco show.

Mayoral earthquake relief funds in Santa Cruz and Watsonville will get shares of the proceeds. Ticketmaster.

Sought by South African concert promoters, Santana looks past Nelson Mandela's release from prison: "Our job is still incomplete. We feel the same as Winnie Mandela. Let the majority rule — one person, one vote. When this has been accomplished, then will be the time to celebrate. Then I would want to play a free concert in the streets to celebrate with the South African people."

ROOTS: His family survived Dust Bowl horrors. Tulsa twang intact, this cult hero could play The Lonesome Gunslinger to a filmic max. White beard, Cherokee cheekbones, understatement as practical art. Below the outer image run humor and calmness — the patience of farmers of a ruined land who watched skies for rain that never came.

As songwriter-guitarist J.J. Cale squints, and speaks in a near-whisper, it's clear all over again that some of this nation's brightest people hang out at rural gas stations. They talk stuff all day long, tell tall stories to the wind, pretend ignorance. And it's this total heritage that lets Cale polish his seemingly simple tunes like some haiku master of ancient Japan. Six years since the last album? That's nuthin. Try waiting for crops, mercy, an even break.

"The drought was a bigger event for my people than World War Two," Cale said in the best dressing room below San Francisco's Great American Music Hall. "I

Savor Scandinavian scenery via documentary film

THE WORLD Traveler Film Series at the Sunset Theater in Carmel continues with a presentation of A Scandinavian Medley on Friday, March 16. Ed Lark will narrate his program at 2 p.m. and again at 8 p.m.

In more than 30 years of globetrotting, no other area of the world has appealed to Ed Lark more than Scandinavia. Some reasons: Scandinavians are especially hospitable to foreigners, it is a land of unsurpassed beauty, fresh air, clean water, lingering traditions, modern comforts.

With Lark as guide, visit Stockholm, one of the most beautiful capital cities in the world; visit the Kings Park, the City Hall, Kings Palace, as well as Drottningholm Palace. Carl Milles Sculpture Park is proof of Sweden's contributions to the art world. In Lappland, take part in a reindeer roundup and travel through some of Sweden's most spectacular mountain scenery.

In Denmark visit Copenhagen, the center of Danish life. It is a happy, carefree city, and not to be missed are the Little Mermaid, Tivoli Gardens, the Bing and Grondahl Porcelain Factory and the popular Walking and Shopping Street. Denmark is famous for having the finest castles in northern Europe, including Fredriksborg Castle and Krohborg, Hamlet's castle. To know the Danes is to experience their celebrations. Copenhagen Carnival is, undoubtedly, the most colorful and fun-filled event in all Denmark.

A major landmark and symbol of Norway's capital city, Oslo, is the Holmenkollen Ski Jump. Scores of flower-lined sidewalk cafes are evidence of Norway's mild climate although the country straddles the Arctic Circle. "Musts" for the visitor include Vigeland Sculpture Park, and the Viking Museum. In the unforgettable Fjord Country are countless waterfalls, lakes and snow-capped mountains. Climb Europe's largest glacier and peer down its deep-blue fissures. Stroll through Bergen and Edvard Grieg's home, where this famous composer created his greatest music. Norway is the most traditional of the Scandinavian countries, so it is not unusual to see a country wedding complete with village costumes. Far north of the Arctic Circle experience the Midnight Sun. Norway is also the home of the mischievous Trolls.

Tickets are $5 and are available at Sunset Center. All seating is reserved. For reservations or further information call 624-3996.

Cantaloupe, honeydew, casaba, Persian and Odessa are all varieties of the muskmelon. Their differences are the result of cultivation in different regions of the world.

THE FJORDS of Norway are depicted in A Scandinavian Medley, to be narrated in person by Ed Lark at Carmel's Sunset Theater. The theater is located on San Carlos Street at Ninth Avenue in Carmel-by-the-Sea. Tickets are $5. A Scandinavian Medley will be screened at 2 p.m. and 8 p.m.

Men's group seeks alternatives to violence

Monterey County Men's Alternatives to Violence is a local group of men who have worked together for four years to provide information and support for men who want to address the issue of abusive behavior in their lives.

Working as non-professional peer counselors, they facilitate weekly open meetings in Monterey and Salinas.

This program has proved to be a needed resource in this area as shown by the ever-increasing numbers of men attending and benefitting from these meetings.

They invite you to attend their forthcoming peer-counselor training if:

— you are interested in learning how men have learned to use violence to solve problems.

— you are ready to join a community-based effort in which men support each other for a change, and — you would be willing to volunteer some of your time helping other men learn alternatives to abusive behavior.

You are needed and you can make a big difference in the quality of this program. To find out more, call your local YMCA or Bruce Doneux at 646-5499.

New Visions

The Western Stage will present the New Visions Festival from March 16 through April 8 in the Studio and Main Stage theaters of the Performing Arts Center at Hartnell College, 156 Homestead Ave., Salinas. All performances are offered free of charge.

New Visions is a multi-faceted performing arts festival which focuses on the theater artist: actors in solo performance, older works seen through the eyes of young directors, fresh new plays by new playwrights in various stages of development, and an opportunity for the patron to experience theater from the inside out.

Upcoming offerings of the New Visions Festival are as follows:

SOLO ARTIST PROJECTS

One, or at most, two actors appear in these productions, all staged at 8 p.m. Friday, March 16:

La Baker, adapted and performed by Sheryl Bailey, focuses on Josephine Baker, the American entertainer who was the toast of two continents in the 1920s and '30s.

One Step ... At a Time, a musical revue adapted and performed by Martin Bunnell, Jr., tells of a struggling actor, through song and dance, his ambitions and dreams.

The Rebel Countess, edited and performed by Lenore Opalach, looks at Constance, the Countess, who rebels against her class and gives all for the Irish underdog.

A MARATHON OF STAGED READINGS (WITH DISCUSSION)

Holding On, by Rick Foster, will be presented at 1 p.m. Saturday, March 17. It offers a middle-aged man's effort to come to terms with his family — both dead and living.

Elvis, the Last Five Minutes, by Judy Montague, looks at an Elvis Presley impersonator/hotel barber who enters a contest and learns more than he ever thought possible. It will be staged at 8 p.m. Saturday, March 17.

A Thousand Cranes debuts at 1 p.m. Sunday, March 18. Kathryn Schultz Miller based this play on the Japanese legend about a young Japanese girl afflicted with radiation poisoning following the bombing of Nagasaki. She is told that if she manages to fold 1,000 origami cranes, she will live.

A Shakespeare Prism is the offering at 2 p.m. Sunday, March 18. Carmel's Ig Heniford wrote three one-acts for high school age actors.

American Requiem is a new musical by John Jay Espino, to be staged at 7 p.m. Sunday, March 18. In six scenes, this operatic-style musical explores the effects of six different wars on Americans.

For additional information about these free shows, contact the Western Stage at 375-2111 or 758-1221.

The Rise and Rise of Daniel Rocket

Ever wish you could fly? Daniel Rocket, a 12-year-old sixth grader who is convinced he can fly, suffers the ridicule of his classmates in The Rise and Rise of Daniel Rocket.

The Peter Parnell play that explores the trauma of growing up continues on the Main Stage at Monterey Peninsula College. Directed by Peter DeBono, The Rise and Rise of Daniel Rocket will be presented at 8 p.m. Thursdays through Saturdays and 2 p.m. Sundays until March 31.

After proving to his classmates that he can fly, Daniel Rocket, played by Norman Stottmeister, soars to fame and fortune. In the second half of the production, which takes place some 20 years later, Daniel returns home a celebrity, but isolated from the simple joys and tender emotions of those around him.

Also in the cast are John Freeman, Patrick Spike, John Farmanesh, Gary Pullen Ivy Cates, Maura Leos, Sherri Shaw, Sheryl Browney and Nancy Kocher.

Tickets are $12 general; $9 for students, military personnel and senior citizens; $6 for children 12 and younger. For reservations call the MPC box office, 646-4213, between 4 and 7:30 p.m. Wednesday through Saturday, or Center Stage Ticketing, 649-5561, Tuesday through Saturday.

Covering the conflict

JOHN ROBINSON and Jerry Gill portray journalists covering the "conflict" in El Salvador. The drama by Rafael Lima can be viewed at the GroveMont Theater Arts Center in New Monterey. (Stephen Moorer photograph).

The Two Brothers; Beauty and the Beast

The Staff Players Repertory Company takes audiences on a journey to the storied world where once-upon-a-time is for grown-ups as well as young people.

Two original scripts, one a familiar tale of Beauty and the Beast, and one a dark ballad of mermaids and Scottish fishermen, The Two Brothers, play together through March 31.

The mermaids include Jessica Stevenson, Elizabeth Klaas and Renee Farjeon. The human beings from the Isle of Skye include Jeffrey Heyer, Chris Heimer and Marcia Hovick. Rhett Butler plays the Old Man of the Sea.

The impossible sisters in Beauty and the Beast are Staci Hartmann and Laurie Petkus. Their father is Ellis Allbee; his nephew will be played by Nina Langlie and Nicole Dauphine. Beauty is played by Jessica Stevenson and the enigmatic beast by Henry Guevara.

The productions are not designed for preschool children, but can be enjoyed by the whole family.

Curtain is at 8 p.m. Thursdays through Saturdays and 2:30 p.m. Sundays at the Indoor Forest Theater, Mountain View and Santa Rita, Carmel.

Tickets are $9 general, $7 for students and senior citizens. For reservations, call 624-1531 or 649-5561.

El Salvador

A third-rate hotel in El Salvador populated by journalists provides the setting for Rafael Lima's El Salvador. The production continues the 1990 Season of New Plays presented by the GroveMont Theater Arts Center.

Lima's characters are TV newsmen, journalists and photographers caught in a continually escalating mood of paranoia, devastation, boredom and hilarity. The play is directed by off-Broadway director Val Hendrickson.

ON STAGE

The production continues at 8 p.m. Thursdays through Saturdays and 7 p.m. Sundays through March 24. One Sunday matinee has been set for 2 p.m. on March 18.

Cafe seating opens one hour before showtime, with a variety of sandwiches, hors d'oeuvres, desserts, beer, wine and soft drinks available before the show and during intermission. The GroveMont Theater Arts Center is at 320 Hoffman (between Lighthouse and Hawthorne) in New Monterey.

The cast of El Salvador includes Jim Webber, John Rousseau, Jerry Gill, James Brady, Brian Huntington, John Robinson and Virginia Morales.

Due to strong language, the production has been rated "R" by the management and no children will be admitted.

Ticket prices on Thursdays and Sundays are $8.50 general and $7 for students, seniors and military. Ticket prices on Fridays and Saturdays are $9.50 general and $8 for students, seniors and military. Advance tickets may be purchased through Center Stage Ticketing at 649-5561. For reservations, call the GroveMont Theater, 649-6852.

84 Charing Cross Road

The Monterey Peninsula College Players conclude their production of 84 Charing Cross Road at Cherry Hall in Carmel.

Nick Zanides directs the cast headed by Alice March as struggling New York writer Helene Hanff and Alan Smith as Frank Doel, proprietor of an antiquarian book store in London. Adapted by James Roose-Evans from the book by Helene Hanff, 84 Charing Cross Road is a dramatization of business letters between Hanff and Marks & Co. in London from 1949 until Doel's death 20 years later.

The business letters eventually become the means whereby Hanff and Doel share their love of good literature. Through the years, Hanff sends "care packages" to the bookstore staff to express her appreciation.

Cast members include Shelley Risko, Kate Richter, Ivan Flansburg, Randy Rock, Marilyn Smith and David Triplett.

Final performances are set at 8 p.m. Friday and Saturday, March 16-17.

Tickets are $8 general; $6 for students, senior citizens and the military. Reservations may be made by calling Center Stage Ticketing, 649-5561. Cherry Hall is at Guadalupe and Fourth in Carmel-by-the-Sea.

Godspell

The New Testament-grounded musical, Godspell, plays at Monterey's Wharf Theater. Gina Welch-Hagen directs this classic, which was written by John Michael Tabelak and Stephen Schwartz.

Curtain is at 8:30 p.m. Fridays and Saturdays and 8 p.m. Sunday through April 8.

Admission is $10 general and $5 for children 12 and under. Group rates are also available. The Wharf Theater is located on Old Fisherman's Wharf in Monterey. For information or reservations, call 649-2333 or 372-1373.

The Hand of the Law

A greedy politician of the Old West schemes to defraud a man of his rightful mine shares, but in the end, justice prevails in The Hand of the Law.

This melodramatic 19th century classic is presented at California's First Theatre.

Curtain is at 8 p.m. Fridays and Saturdays.

The theater, the oldest in the state, is located at the corner of Scott and Pacific streets in historic downtown Monterey.

Tickets are $6 for adults, $5 for seniors and teens and $4 for subteens. The theater box office is open 1 to 5 p.m. Wednesdays and Thursdays and 1 to 8 p.m. Fridays and Saturdays.

For tickets or information, call 375-4916 or 649-5561.

New York writer

ALICE MARCH portrays New York writer Helene Hanff, whose actual correspondence with the proprietor of a London bookstore became the basis for the play, 84 Charing Cross Road. The production concludes its run this weekend at Cherry Hall in Carmel.

Motorcycle star helps riders learn safety

Safety is a top priority for World Championship 500cc Grand Prix motorcycle racer Randy Mamola. To share this commitment to safety with the motorcycling community, Mamola has put together, in cooperation with Reg Pridmore's Class Inc. Safety Schools, a weekend of instruction offering participants an inside edge to everyday street riding in a safe and responsible manner.

Operators of the Laguna Seca Raceway, (S.C.R.A.M.P.) have donated the track for the event which will benefit Mamola's favorite charity, "Save The Children."

The dates available for the two one-day classes are Saturday and Sunday, April 14-15.

This is an opportunity to ride the Laguna Seca Grand prix race course, and gain from the safe, low pressure learning techniques of Reg Pridmore and his staff. The fee for each session will be partially tax deductible, as proceeds will be donated to "Save The Children" of Westport, Ct. This is not a race school, it is a confidence and safety awareness school.

During the lunch break each day, Mamola will lead riders around the Laguna Seca track after they have donated $5 to "Save The Children." This ride is available to both class participants and any other motorcyclists who may have come to observe just to see who's there. After class has finished each day, there will be items available at an auction benefiting "Save The Children," along with Mamola's "Save The Children Poster."

The Class Inc. Safety School classes have a reputation for filling up very quickly, so make arrangements now to take your instruction by calling Reg Pridmore at (805) 642-7228. Advance reservations for the event are required.

JAZZ TIDES

By John Detro

don't know why we stayed — and I can't remember ever taking a guitar lesson. I've got a bad sore throat. What was the question?"

My stepdad's Aunt Echo fled the Dust Bowl for California. Her spirit perhaps reminded: Ask standard things and this man's capable of a merciless put-on. So — how come he writes songs instead of holding up banks?

Cale smiled a little. "Good. Maybe all musicians are outlaws, in a sense, but I don't see myself that way. I slid into it. A kid up the block had a guitar. He showed me a few touches, and I borrowed guitars until a dishwasher job meant payments on an old Gibson. I never took the writing seriously. I'm mostly self-taught off of records — Les Paul, Chet Atkins. Gatemouth Brown, Fats Domino, Little Richard, Mose — any time I can steal a lick from Mose Allison, I will. There were the usual teen hops and bar bands. Day work was, like, steel mills. I drifted into Los Angeles and was an engineer, mixing sessions. Then Eric Clapton had a big hit with a song I wrote in '65 — After Midnight. I always thought I'd have to grow up someday and get a real job, but money came. I decided I was a songwriter because, you know, success hit me there. Bobby Blue Bland, Chet Atkins, Waylon Jennings, Cissy Houston, Lynard Skynard — they had good luck with my tunes too."

He cut six packages for Shelter Records and three more at Mercury. The new item — Travel-Log from Silvertone/RCA — contains such spare and haunting titles as New Orleans and Tijuana. "I sit around, watch TV, shop, sleep — I'm not married at this time. I might go on in and lay down a track or three every few years. I discovered I had an album about places. So I left home (country atmosphere near San Diego) and we're on the road a tiny bit."

Block-long lines awaited tickets for both shows. That sore throat didn't stop the star from pleasing young fans with laid-back Cale hits like Cocaine and Crazy Mama. His vocals borrowed from Mose and Hoagy Carmichael ("I listen, listen more, use what's good"); he employed his Casio PG-380 Guitar Synth only as a straight-ahead, technically brilliant guitar. A long encore ended with the new composition about bordertown women daring male tourists to help them cross the line: "Hey gringo...Tell them I'm your daughter." Cale's songs demonstrated such high craftsmanship that they seemed inevitable. ("Why fret and hurry? I still get royalty checks on things I wrote decades ago.")

The band could be called American Eclectic: Cale's lead, saxist Steve Douglas (he bought Ornette Coleman's original white plastic alto in Manhattan a dozen years back), the lovely Christine Lakewood (rhythm guitar and vocals), former James Brown stalwart Tim Drummond on Fender bass, Jimmy Karstein (congas/timbales/bells), stone pro keyboardist Spooner Oldham, Jim Cruce (trap set). Without altering the book at all, this crew would be at home in South Side Chicago, Nashville, New Orleans for Heritage Festival time. Range: from party shuffles to roadwise lost-love ballads and mature post-bop harmonies right out of John McLaughlin recording dates.

"I'm no message guy when I write," Cale said. "I work on a groove." Asked if he'd expand upon that thought, J.J. dropped the lingo of rural gas stations and delightedly took up critic-type talk for one bare instant: "Let's just say that a good song transcends genre."

THEATER REVIEW

By Joan Swartz Paonessa

More questions than can be answered

THE RISE and Rise of Daniel Rocket is intriguing. As a theater piece it feels a bit unfinished, like a workshop project which has been aborted too soon. Questions are raised here, important questions which are never answered. Perhaps that's the point, and the play is a metaphor for life itself, a condition which, as we all know, inevitably proposes more questions than can be answered!

The Monterey Peninsula College Main Stage is currently presenting the Peter Parnell opus, which was first produced in 1982 under the aegis of Playwrights Horizon. It is a work inspired by, and dedicated to, Tom Hulce, that rara avis in the cinematic and theatrical firmaments.

Peter De Bono has done a sparkling job of directing; scenes flow well despite the episodic style, and changes are accomplished with a minimum of disruption.

Norman Stottmeister's portrayal of the two Daniels is a fluid tour de force. Daniel as a youth, among peers who regard his eccentricity with disdain and suspicion, is saved from total isolation by his friendship with Richard (played with sensitivity by John Freeman), and his love for Alice (Ivy Cates does a beautifully intelligent job here). But even these two consider their unusual companion needful of concern and looking-after.

Years pass, and we are presented with the outcome of Daniel's 20-year success as a public figure. He seems to wear his celebrity well, until it becomes clear that he has returned to the scenes of childhood to recapture something. What has he lost? Is it self-doubt, or loneliness, or a hunger for acceptance which drives him backward in time? He seeks the fulfillment of a promise which is no less poignant for being largely a product of his own imaginings.

The supporting actors are stellar. There isn't a bad performance in the bunch. C. Patrick J. Spike is completely believable as Jeffrey — his adolescent speech patterns are right on. Gary Pullen does nice double duty as Roger, the well-adjusted one. The character of Steven, the malcontent, is sharply portrayed by John Farmanesh.

The driven, conscientious Claudia is strongly played by Maura Leos. Sheryl Browney is wonderfully absent as Penny, and Sherri Shaw does a superb job as Judy, the mainstream achiever.

Special mention must be made of Nancy Kocher as Miss Rice, the school teacher. Ms. Kocher is an endearing and intelligent performer whose scenes shine with life.

Technical support, as always at MPC, is just fine. The set is fittingly light and sketchy, the costuming appropriately generation-specific. Catherine Holliday's crew and Roe Reed III on the fly-ropes made smooth work of the numerous changes required. The incidental music was inspired, evocative and moving.

One can only wish that playwright Parnell had gone farther with his premise. To venture a moral "If a rare butterfly makes his dwelling-place in your garden, you must never lose faith in his ability to fly." Perhaps that is the message of "Daniel Rocket" — perhaps not. See for yourself, Thursday, Friday, Saturday evenings at 8, Sunday afternoons at 2, until March 25.

An ancient remedy for a toothache was to eat a mouse.

Harbor seal pups best left alone, SPCA experts advise

The SPCA of Monterey County, a humane society, alerts all central coast residents that the harbor seal pupping season has arrived at the Central California coastline. While tourist and beach strollers are apt to stumble upon what looks to be an orphaned harbor seal pup, more likely its mother is temporarily away fishing and has every intention of returning to her young baby.

Well intentioned "rescuers" of these pups are in fact not helping but permanently separating a mother from her helpless pup. The SPCA of Monterey County reminds all persons who come upon a baby harbor seal to do the following:

1. Contact The SPCA of Monterey County, 373-2631 or 422-4721.

2. Do NOT go near the animal but try to observe from a distance, out of sight of the returning mother.

3. Keep all dogs and people away from the pup(s).

4. If, after several hours of observation, the mother has not returned for her pup, again, contact The SPCA of Monterey County for further instructions.

The George Whittell Wildlife Center, located at The SPCA, 1002 Monterey/Salinas Highway 68 (across from the Laguna Seca Recreation Entrance) can handle any call regarding harbor seals.

John Sexton autographs 'Quiet Light'

Photographer John Sexton and his work will be honored with a reception from 5:30 to 7:30 p.m. Sunday, March 18 at the Thunderbird Bookshop. The Quiet Light poster will be presented for the first time and available for purchase.

The essays of James Alinder, director of Friends of Photography, and Colin Fletcher, author of The Complete Walker, introduce Sexton's compilation of black and white photographs in his Quiet Light: Fifteen Years of Photography. Alinder and Fletcher will join Sexton as special guests.

John Sexton chooses to photograph in what he refers to as "the quiet light, a soft glow of gentle, yet intense light, which he finds occasionally at dawn, but more often late in the day, after the sun has set."

He is a member of the Board of Trustees of The Friends of Photography.

MUSIC CORNER

By Nathalie Plotkin

Romantic composers dominate recital

PROGRAM-MAKING IS always an interesting and individual artistic procedure, even if the results could be more satisfying musically for the audience. The internationally renowned pianist Jean-Philippe Collard is very much an individualist and furthermore, his position in the performing firmament enforces his right to play whatever he wishes in his concerts.

Appearing Sunday afternoon for the Keyboard Artist Series in Sunset Theater, he again chose a program which was unusually oriented. This time it was music by two of the great romantic composers of the first half of the nineteenth century. Coincidentally both men were born in 1810 and were highly regarded as virtuoso pianists.

Collard began the recital with two works by Robert Schumann. The "Kinderscenen," op. 15, is a set of 13 short pieces about childhood. Mostly they are lieder-like vignettes, each one self-contained and expressive of their titles. "Dreaming" (the familiar "Traumerei") was tender and dreamy. "Curious Stories" was gently playful. "Quite Happy" was an airy scherzo. Collard's playing was informed and aware. He captured and made explicit the varying moods of the music, underlining its charm.

But then we got "Kreisleriana" op. 16, which was more of the same, but on a larger and longer scale. It is dedicated to Chopin and consists of eight untitled pieces, mainly in two differing moods. Though the playing was beautifully sensitive, the contrast between the more passionate and exciting odd numbered movements and the reflective sensibility of the even numbered ones was lost. They became repetitious and difficult to keep in perspective since the forms and thematic materials were so similar. Collard created wonderful tonal textures, but these sounded more like essays than romantic poetry. It eventually became very evident that offering an unrelieved hour of short Schumann pieces was just too much.

On the other hand, short Chopin is quite another matter. When Collard applied his very fine pianism to two posthumous Nocturnes to open the second half of the program, it was pure aural pleasure. The "Nocturne in E Minor" seemed to bring the flowering of his interpretive skill out in a passionate, yet refined performance. The "Nocturne in C Sharp Minor" was exquisitely traced and achieved a quiet loveliness. The two waltzes which were played later as encores were equally gemlike.

In an excellent programming contrast, the artist played Chopin's "Sonata No. 3 in B Minor," op. 58 and what an exceptional offering it was. From the imperious opening call, Collard maintained the thrust and excitement of the movement all the way. His conception, while fleet-fingered and elegant, had the requisite romantic warmth and strength.

The Scherzo needed more lightness in touch, but the Trio was calm and reflective. The Largo was a lovely swaying barcarolle, with a singing legato line. The rather rambling movement was given an overall cohesive outline and the pianism was full of delicacy and refinement.

The Presto is exorbitantly difficult and only here did Collard appear to be laboring. Otherwise and at all other times he made all his musical points calmly and without any noticeable stress. This is not to imply any lack in any area, because the end result was a completely satisfying, rippling, soaring and scintillating performance which well illustrated what maturity means to a true artist.

PUMPKIN SUNSET is among the original oil paintings by Richard Murray that can be viewed at the Zantman Art Galleries in Carmel. Although much of his work reflects his love of the Utah landscape, the artist has travelled extensively in Africa, the Mediterranean, Central America, the British Islands and the United States, bringing back subject matter of varied landscapes and experiences. A reception for the artist is set 4 to 7 p.m. Saturday, March 17 at the Zantman gallery on Sixth Avenue at Mission Street. For details, call 800-344-9359.

Artwork by Terry Dean Adkison featured at Portofino

Portofino Cafe in Pacific Grove will exhibit the works of Terry Dean Adkison throughout March.

This retrospective, dating back to 1980, will feature watercolor collages, plexiglass paintings and sculptures, and the latest from Adkison's original gypsum sculptures.

Terry Dean Adkison moved to the Monterey Peninsula in the fall of 1984, bringing with him a dedication to modern art. His works reflect his background in anatomy and each medium represents a new stage in his life.

The colorful paintings on plexiglass of leggy, energetic figures were created while living in San Francisco, and document the fast-paced lifestyle he found there. The simple figures are alive with a light that seems to pulse through a nervous system and then crackle off into space. The figures interact or stand alone in a crowd, and although we can't see their features, we know how they feel.

These works employ several different acrylic paints applied in layers to the front and back of the pieces and pressed between two sheets of plexiglass.

Adkison holds a Masters of Fine Arts degree in sculpture and drawing

DANIEL SOTZMAN was the artist and D. Glassbach served as engraver for the series of hand-colored, 18th century German etchings that comprise "Birds, Beasts and Biota." The collection can be viewed at the Pacific Grove Museum of Natural History, 165 Forest Ave., Pacific Grove. For details, call 372-4212.

18th century art prints exhibited

An exhibition of hand-colored 18th century German etchings titled "Birds, Beasts and Biota" can be viewed throughout March at the Pacific Grove Museum of Natural History. The museum is located at 165 Forest Ave. in Pacific Grove.

The etchings in this exhibition were originally created as illustrations for three small volumes of natural history printed in 1780, 1782 and 1783. At that time, an 18th century German engraver, known simply as D. Glassbach, made the etchings after drawings of German artist Daniel Sotzman (1754-1840).

Some years after publication, the etchings were removed from the three books and dispersed as original fine arts prints. A sizable number of the now widely-scattered prints surfaced during the 1950s in a San Francisco antique shop. After their recent donation to the Pacific Grove Museum of Natural History, the prints were organized into a travelling exhibition funded by the Ars Associated Foundation.

Because the original purpose of the Sotzman/Glassbach illustrations was to impart scientific information, this exhibition includes labels describing the habitats and basic characteristics of the birds, mammals and amphibians limned on paper more than 200 years ago by Daniel Sotzman and his cohort D. Glassbach.

Jay Campbell's works featured

PACIFIC GROVE artist Jay Campbell will be honored Friday, March 16 at an opening of his one-man show at the Gallery 7 on 17th Street in Pacific Grove.

The opening will take place from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m. The show will run through April 20.

Campbell is a graduate of Vesper George School of Art in Boston and Pratt Institute in Brooklyn. He has taught at the Butera School of Art in Boston and has lectured at art schools throughout the Boston area.

He is a past first-prize winner of the Artist Guild's Juried Show, held at the Society of Illustrators in New York City.

Campbell has had a number of one-man shows on the Monterey Peninsula. He most recently exhibited his work at a joint show at the Marjorie Evans Gallery in Carmel this past October.

He has been painting in California since the late 1970s and strives to bring the vision of an East Coast artist to typical local scenes.

He was one of 48 artists selected by the Monterey County Arts Commission last summer to take part in the Cannery Row Mural supervised by Bruce Arris.

Campbell's artwork has appeared in a number of local publications, including Pacific Monthly, Monterey Life, the Monterey Herald, and the Carmel Pine Cone. His "Hometown Sketches" is a regular feature of the Pacific Grove Monarch.

He also illustrates children's books, most recently Hump-Free the Wrongway Whale, Hump-Free Visits the Vancouver Expo, Hump-Free Heads for Hawaii, and Hump-Free Goes to Galapagos, all written by Henry Eisemann.

Joshua Wesson overseas wine talk, testing

Joshua Wesson will be the guest speaker for a "Talk and Tasting Luncheon," set noon Wednesday, March 21. Advance reservations are required. Send $14 to Thunderbird Bookshop, P.O. Box 22830, Carmel, CA 93922.

Joshua Wesson and co-author David Rosengarten wrote Red Wine with Fish: The New Art of Matching Wine with Food. In the words of New York Times restaurant critic Bryan Miller, these two have "consummated the marriage of wine with food." The authors admit "gleeful disdain" for what they call "the terrifying tradition known as 'food with wine rules,' the dogmatic and cliched guidelines that can needlessly intimidate people." Rosengarten and Wesson offer alternatives to those guidelines, offering recipes and menus that dramatically contradict the conventional.

Wesson is the copublisher and coeditor of The Wine & Food Companion. In 1984, he was named "Best Sommelier in America," and in 1986 he was selected as one of the top five sommeliers in the world.

Change co-dependency to creativity

Can you be intimate in a relationship without losing yourself? Clinical social worker Patrick Ford will examine this and other issues in a free lecture, "Relationships: From Co-dependency to Co-Creativity," at 10 a.m. Saturday, March 17 in the Community Hospital Recovery Center.

The workshop will take place in the Recovery Center's education building, 576 Hartnell St., Monterey.

Ford will give advice on how to give yourself permission to have feelings and how to resolve arguments. Continuing education credit is available.

For more information, call 373-0924.

Exercisers: begin and win!

Learn how to strengthen your heart, increase your energy and design an exercise program just for you in the class, "Begin and Win."

Classes meet 5:30 to 6:30 p.m. Tuesdays and Thursdays through April 26 in the Adaptive PE building at Monterey Peninsula College.

Instructors Pattie Troy and Josie Harris will gear the class toward people who have been meaning to begin an exercise program but aren't sure how.

Class fee is $40. For information or to register, call 625-4708.

Family, teen workshops offered

There are two new groups forming at the Community Counseling Center in Monterey. The group, "Teens in the '90s," will offer teens a chance to focus on the expectations, difficulties and challenges they face in this new decade.

The other group, "One-Parent Families in the '90s," will be a therapy group. It will provide single parents the opportunity to share with one another, and to address their unique concerns.

For further information, call 373-4775.

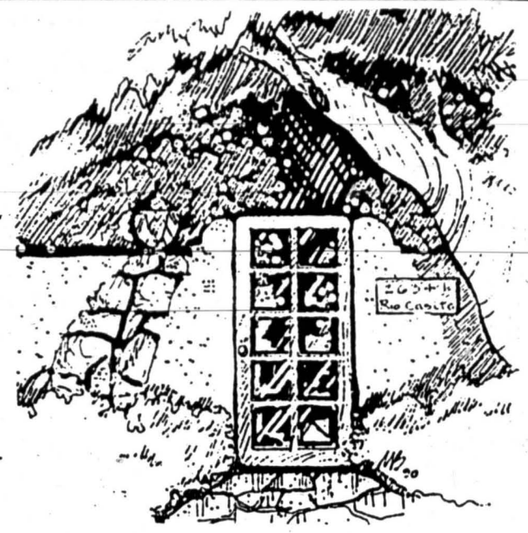
Carmel Point Home



Everything you've ever wanted in a Carmel Point home is reflected in "Rio Casita," beautifully designed by Michael Bolton and quality-remodeled by Brian Groza. On a quiet lane, steps from the beach, this romantic residence is secluded behind plaster & stone walls and Carmel-stone courtyard. Stunningly remodeled to relfect its 75-year old history with modern day ambiance, you'll enjoy such features as the carriage room converted to the formal dining room, and the retaining of original paneled walls, the staircase, open-beam ceilings and wood-paned windows. The interior is light, open and charming with oversized French doors in every room leading to gardens or verandas overlooking views of the mountains & Bird Sanctuary. Outstanding features include 3 fireplaces, the family room opening to a gourmet-style kitchen with marble counters, maple cabinets & Carmel stone walls, a formal step-down living room, 3 bedrooms & 2½ baths with marble floors & custom fixtures, the cream-colored walls & white ceilings blend with the natural-colored marble floors and wool carpeting. The exterior is enchanting with landscaped gardens, Carmel-stone accents, walkways & patios. And there are even antique carriage lamps to light your way home. $995,000.

SOUTH OF OCEAN

MEANING south of Carmel's Ocean Avenue, of course, just where everyone wants to be. If you have your heart set on an old-fashioned Carmel charmer, look no further because here's a home that's just come on the market, offering charm, privacy, and location. Step through the garden gate into the enclosed brick patio with a sunny southern exposure. Then enter the generous-sized living room with its vaulted ceiling and inviting brick fireplace, and note the large kitchen with its pleasant breakfast area at one end. Two bedrooms, two baths, hardwood floors, and every room has a door opening to the outside. Best of all, the house stands on an oversized corner lot. $795,000.

OUT OF BOUNDS

GOLFER'S ALERT! Just listed in this immaculate home with expansive outlooks over the 16th fairway of Spyglass golf course, right next to the white "out of bounds" stake. It's like having acres of your own lawn, but without the expensive upkeep! An entryway with slate floor beckons you inside, and beyond are spacious rooms laid out in a workable floor plan. Living room, den, and luxurious master suite offer picture-window views of the golf course. Up-to-date kitchen with breakfast area and good storage, along with a laundry/office. This is a golfer's dream home in a neighborhood of far more expensive homes. Priced to sell at $725,000.

AN INCREDIBLE HOME

OUR EXCLUSIVE...an unusually fine property running from Scenic Road to San Antonio on the equivalent of four lots, in the most desirable area of Carmel. Unsurpassed water views of Point Lobos to Point Pescadero from spacious living room, dining room, modern kitchen, and luxurious master suite. This home has been completely remodeled and updated, and tastefully, indeed stunningly redecorated, to provide a luxurious seaside retreat. There are two bedrooms, but three other rooms could be used as either bedrooms or for other purposes such as an office. The house is U-shaped, and it provides A sunny, sheltered patio to which most of the rooms open. Altogether a home of great quality. Asking $4,500,000.

IF YOU LIKE...

A GOOD neighborhood (Carmel's Hatton Fields)...a big lot (three-quarters of an acre, and level)...and a comfortable house...then look no further. The living room is huge, and there are three bedrooms and two baths, along with a quiet patio in the rear. Let's be frank and admit there's a lot of work to be done, but when you get through you'll have a million-dollar property. $610,000.

A WHITE PICKET FENCE

AND A GRASSY plot with daffodils set off this cute little house in Monterey to perfection! The house has been newly remodeled to provide a master bedroom and bath, along with a laundry. Some wiring and plumbing is new, and all of it is up to code. The big living room with its corner brick fireplace gives ample space for a variety of furniture arrangements. Fully fenced rear yard with a structure that could be a hobby room or workshop. $279,000.
